Death Toll Mounts to 35 In Wake Of Hurricane

25 Killed on Island Of St. Helena; Property Damage Reported High

(Pictures On Pages 3 and 10.)

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Aug. 12.—The hurricane-swept coasts of South Carolina and Georgia counted a possible 35 dead tonight and damage in the hundreds of thousands of dollars as work crews concentrated on restoring communications crippled by the worst storm to strike the area in recent years.

While authorities attempted to penetrate isolated towns and islands to check casualties, the Red Cross reported from Washington that it had received word from a Coast Guard radio truck operating near Beaufort, S. C., that 25 persons were killed on St. Helena Island.

Two Die in Savannah

Red Cross headquarters in Washington received word later tonight that eight colored persons had perished on Ladies Island off Beaufort.

Two persons died during the height of the gale in Savannah, where the wind at times reached a velocity of 68 miles an hour. Earlier reports of six drownings at Folly Beach near Charleston, S. C., and ten deaths in Beaufort County were not confirmed.

St. Helena Island is off the coast from Beaufort. The report of the 25 deaths there was sent the Red Cross by Mrs. A. M. Neighbors, assistant Red Cross field director at Parris Island, Marine Corps base, which also was hard hit by the storm.

Red Cross officials said they had received no direct word from either Charleston or Beaufort. They recalled that St. Helena Island was in the path of a disastrous hurricane in 1893 when between 8,000 and 9,000 colored persons lost their lives.

Many Boats Sunk

Many small boats were sunk during the hurricane which yesterday blew in from the Atlantic Ocean just above Brunswick, Ga., and struck all along the coast until it blew itself out in the vicinity of Charleston. The waterfront of the resort city of Beaufort was smashed. Historic Charleston was pounded by wind and water, a large portion of the city being flooded. Savannah reported numerous buildings unroofed

'Certain Publicity Detrimental,' Rieber Explains

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—Torkild Rieber today resigned his $100,000-a-year job as chairman of the board of the Texas Corporation "because of certain publicity, detrimental to the company," arising from his association with Dr. Gerhard A. Westrick, German commercial agent in this country.

The resignation was announced in a statement issued by the board of directors which said that it was accepted at a board meeting today. The meeting lasted from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. (E. S. T.) and during it Rieber discussed with the board his reasons for resigning.

"The statement was made," said the formal announcement, "that it was with real regret on the part of each individual member of the board that under existent circumstances it seemed advisable to accept this resignation."

Westrick's activities in this country have been more or less mysterious, but he is an accredited attache of the German Embassy and

5-Cent Milk A Mockery, Schulte Says

Washington's needy families bought 1,171 quarts of 5-cent milk yesterday as Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, attacked the system of distributing the milk by saying that pigs on farms in Maryland and Virginia came ahead of "nursing mothers and children in Washington."

A total of 1,976 quarts would have been distributed if all those who received eligibility cards from the Public Assistance Division, Board of Public Welfare, had obtained their quota.

Eligibility cards were sent yesterday to an additional 788 persons, according to Otto J. Cass, division director.

Cass reported the sales depot at Harrison School, Twelfth and V streets northwest, sold 150 quarts out of a possible of 285, on the eligibility basis for that area. Number 5 Precinct Police Station, Fifth and E streets southeast, sold 149 quarts out of a possible 237, and Number 10 Fire Station, Maryland avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northeast, sold 132 quarts out of a possible 243. There are eight other depots.

Representative Schulte told the House that relief milk distribution in Washington was a "monstrosity and a joke."

He claimed the methods by which relief milk is sold to the poor denied them an adequate supply.

"A nursing mother may have one pint of milk a day," he said, "and children under 17 years of age may have one pint a day. But all adults over that age may have only one-

Willkie Sees Hugh Johnson On Draft Bill

Nominee's Support Expected to Be Voiced In Acceptance Speech

By Emmet Crozier.
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 12.—National defense and conscription engaged Wendell L. Willkie's attention today. He discussed those subjects for several hours with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and former President Herbert Hoover, and while no statement was forthcoming on the exchange of views, it was believed here that Willkie would support the principle of conscription in his address at Elwood, Ind., next Saturday, accepting the Republican nomination for President.

Gen. Johnson, who administered the Selective Service Act in 1917 and 1918, is an outstanding advocate of conscription, and Mr. Hoover likewise has expressed the belief that conscription is the best method of meeting the imminent threat of war.

Much of the discussion, it is understood, dealt critically with the conscription bill now pending in Congress, the circumstances under which it was hastily presented to the country, and the real nature of the emergency with which it is expected to deal. It is expected that Willkie will express himself vigorously on these phases in his acceptance speech.

Hoover, who had dinner with the Republican nominee and Johnson last night, visited the Willkie suite on the sixth floor of the Broadmoor hotel again today for breakfast and another conference.

"We discussed just about everything you can think of," Willkie told reporters later; "foreign affairs, the status of England, conscription, the farm situation—all the things that most any bunch of fellows

Jackson Gives Warning on Election Book

Senator Hatch Calls On Democrats To Abandon Sales Of Pamphlet Ads

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

The Democratic author of the Hatch "clean politics" law yesterday called on his own party to abandon at once plans to publish and circulate the party's campaign book, long under fire as a means of evading the Corrupt Practices Act.

At the same time, Attorney General Jackson warned Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn against carrying out a plan to distribute the books through State and county organizations.

Jackson said the view that "State laws could make permissable that which a Federal law prohibits" is not "accepted or approved by the Department of Justice."

Winning high praise on the Senate floor for his "complete impartiality" in the matter, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, declared before the Senate:

"There is just one thing to do about this convention book. Regardless of what the cost may be or what effect it may have, it should be discontinued right now."

'Obey Law,' Hatch Says

"As I said last week to the Republican National Committee, 'obey the spirit as well as the letter of the law', so that I say this week to the Democratic National Committee, 'obey the spirit as well as the letter of the law.'

He referred to his previous declarations against an opinion by Henry P. Fletcher, general counsel of the Republican National Committee, that the Hatch Act's $5,000 limitation on individual campaign gifts could be avoided by subdividing contributions, some to the National Committee and others to State or local campaign organizations.

"I think the things that my own national committee is doing today or proposing to do with the publication and sale of the convention book," the Senator said yesterday, "amounts just as much to an evasion of the law, an evasion of the principle and purpose, as the plan that Mr. Fletcher conceived and which I denounced last week.

"I do not apply a rule to the Republican Party which I do not also apply to the Democratic Party.

"Under the act the sale of the book is not prohibited, but its purchase is a violation of the law. Whether the Democratic Party,

Woman Left Use Of $65,000 if She Shuns Marriage

Dr. George Leman Collins, former medical director of the United States Public Health Service, left a $65,000 trust fund to a California woman on the condition, in effect, that she never marry.

Dr. Collins' will, filed for probate in the District Court yesterday, provided that the American Security and Trust Company hold the $65,000 for Miss Nelda King, of Oakland, Calif., but Dr. Collins directed that if Miss King were married "to any other person than myself, either prior or subsequent to my death," the money should be paid to Mrs. Herman Douglas Collins, of Boston.

The drowned youngster is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Reese, of 313 South Columbus street.

Nazis Claim Air Control Of Channel

Press Says English Battle Fleet May Have Fled Already; Predict Invasion Soon

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), Aug. 13.—Claiming virtual control of the air over the bomb-splattered English Channel, German sources predicted today that successive raids would stab steadily inland until "not even London" would be safe from bomb-destruction.

Hailing air force reports of tremendous ruin to Britain's coast defenses and naval bases in the three days of stepped-up aerial blitzkrieg, the German press said the battle fleet Britain counted on to hold off direct assault might already have been forced to clear out of Channel bases.

The Germans claimed 213 British planes wrecked in the three days of fighting, last Thursday, Sunday and yesterday—including those smashed by bombs dropped on airdromes.

Invasion Appears at Hand

Sunday and yesterday, the Germans reported, 184 were shot out of the air, 91 yesterday and 93 Sunday, to German losses of 46, 19 yesterday and 27 Sunday.

From the intensity of the attacks they looked more and more like preparation for the long-expected grand-scale invasion.

The British naval base at Portsmouth, where huge fires were reported; the airport at Manston, declared "among others" to have been destroyed, and the port of Margate on the Thames Estuary, gateway to London, bore the brunt of Monday's assaults.

Toll of British Planes

The German radio reported the British lost 48 planes in the battle over Portsmouth alone, where 12 German planes were shot down.

It said 15 British planes were destroyed at Manston, 12 of them on the ground, and claimed heavy losses at the airdromes of Canterbury, Lympe and Hawkinge.

Still other Nazi squadrons screamed down on barrage balloon-protected British convoys in the accentuated campaign to destroy Britain's shipping and harbor facilities and demoralize her people.

The Germans asserted a dive-bombing attack on a convoy east of Southend sank two freighters and set another afire, with the Germans and British each losing a plane.

All British shipping and naval operations in the Channel now are

Morgan Marooned As Yacht Grounds In Thick Fog

Fishers Island, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP).—J. P. Morgan was marooned aboard his 115-foot chartered yacht Inishowen V today when it ran aground in thick fog near Fort Wright on Long Island Sound.

His son, Junius S., and a party of friends also were aboard. A coast guard patrol boat freed the yacht after several hours.

Motorists' Delight

'Cash Discounts' for Gasoline Bring Raging Price War Here

Slashes of 2 and 3 cents a gallon in gasoline prices brought joy to motorists yesteday but losses to retailers as a new cut throat price war raged throughout the city.

The price cuts were brought about through "discounts for cash" from the usual rate of 16 cents for "regular" and 18 cents for leaded gas.

The usual price, with its 3-cent profit for stations which sell several brands and 4-cent profit for those handling one product, held up fairly well through a summer armistice.

These prices went into effect over most of the city when a large group of dealers formed an association last spring to combat the disastrous price-cutting of the previous winter.

The association was dissolved almost immediately after the threat of a Justice Department antitrust suit, but the prices were maintained.

The Justice Department charged that the higher prices would cost District motorists almost $2,000,000 a year. The retailers claim that the loss of this revenue under the lower prices will leave most of them operating at a loss.

House Group Favors Calling Out Guard

Draft Will Make U. S. Militaristic Nation, Norris Tells Senate

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Legislation empowering the President to call out the National Guard and Army Reserves for a year's service anywhere in the Western Hemisphere, American possessions or the Philippines was approved unanimously by the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

The action came shortly after a staunch backer of the Administration's foreign and domestic policies denounced the pending Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill as leading the United States into dictatorship.

Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, told the Senate during the second day of debate on the draft measure that the establishment of a large standing army by universal conscription will turn the the United States into a militaristic nation that will "take anything it wants from anybody who is not able to defend it."

Job Guarantee Amended

Before voting on the National Guard mobilization measure, the House committee drastically modified the Senate approved section guaranteeing reemployment to men called into active service and broadened the provision exempting men with dependents.

By what was announced as a vote of "approximately 2 to 1" the group withdrew from the National Labor Relations Board jurisdiction over cases where employers fail to rehire Guardsmen or Reservists upon completion of their active Army service. Men denied reemployment under the amended provision, must go to the nearest United States District Court for redress.

Opponents of the change said it would greatly weaken the reemployment guarantee by requiring the individual Guardsmen to undertake legal action, rather than giving the NRLB control of such cases. The original draft, approved by the Senate, made a refusal of

'The Blitzkrieg Is On'

'Battle of Britain' Has Begun, London Newspapers Warn

London (Tuesday), Aug. 13 (AP).—The Morning Press, by headline, news story and editorial, declared today that the war of waiting which followed Germany's blitz victories on the continent is ended and that the intensified air attacks on the channel coast mark the beginning of the "Battle of Britain."

"The battle of Britain is on," declared the Express headline, and the Mail echoed it with: "Blitzkrieg is on—R. A. F. Faces the Great Test."

The News Chronicle said:

"We may learn next of raids on our airdromes and then perhaps of parachute landings and attempted invasion. We may well be on the verge of our greatest testing time."

"The calmness and fortitude with which the people from the coast towns are going about their business must be as infuriating to Hitler as are the courage and cleverness of our flying men," said the Herald.

"Possibly the Germans consider the raids will serve as a cloak to conceal invasion preparations on the French and other occupied coasts. By launching waves of hundreds of bombers with fighter escorts, they hope to keep the R. A. F. so busy that reconnaissance work will be neglected," the Telegraph warned.

"In this they are unlikely to achieve their object."

Tons of Bombs Rain on 3 Great Naval Bases; British Claim Felling 61 Raiders; Italian Activity Reported

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Aug. 13.—Adolf Hitler's long-threatened aerial blitzkrieg on Britain burst into a full-throated roar of destruction today as Nazi warplanes struck at every corner of England.

They thus carried into the third consecutive day a ferocious assault which began with flights of 400 or more planes, leaped to 500 or more yesterday, and reached undisclosed numbers this morning.

There were indications that the onslaught may now be backed by cannon fire from the continent and possibly aided by Italian airmen.

The pattern of attack remained unvaried, as it has since extensive raids first began June 18, but the scope was tremendous. From northeast, northwest, southeast, southwest—from every section of the island—came reports of exploding bombs. Reports of damage were confined to civilian structures as the Nazi novelty "scream" bombs hurtled down.

British fighters, anti-aircraft gunners and searchlight crews teamed up to make the sky a deadly jungle for the invaders.

British Report Downing 61 Nazi Planes

The raids this morning and last night followed up those of the waves of swastika-flaunting bombers which dropped tons of explosives Monday on Britain's great naval bases at Portsmouth, Southampton and Dover.

The British asserted their defense forces had sent at least 61 enemy planes to destruction in the Monday conflict. Thirteen defending British planes were missing, and three British bombers were lost in Sunday night raids on German gasoline plants and airdromes.

"Latest reports," the Air Ministry said, "reveal that Spitfire and Hurricane pilots shot down ... bombers and fighters.

"Anti-aircraft gunners had their best day since raids on the south coast began. They shot down seven German bombers."

A later bulletin raised the score to 61.

At one southeast coast town, houses were damaged by explosions which at first were attributed to bombs but later were believed to have been due to gunfire.

(Supporting the belief that the Germans at last have unlimbered their coastal cannon against England was the fragmentary nature of this report, which got through from London only after 10 hours and which said British authorities were "investigating.")

Hector Bywater, naval expert of the London News Chronicle, devoted his article today to "guns across the channel," declaring that they could be effective only if aided by aerial "spotters."

"The Germans certainly have mounted long-range guns between Calais and Boulogne," he wrote, "but they will be simply shooting into the blue unless they have effective spotters aloft; and we may be confident these spotters will have a rough time from the R. A. F."

Sunday's Toll Raised to 74 Craft

There were strong rumors that Italy, Germany's ally, at last was participating in the raids on Britain. Authoritative circles in London disclosed that an Italian was among the crew of a German bomber captured Sunday, but discounted the likelihood of Italian planes being used. Even if this were the case, it was said, confirmation would be unlikely for some time.

The British announced that naval guns brought down five German planes Sunday, raising the official total for that day to 65 and the unofficial count to 74. (The Germans said Sunday-Monday totals were 184 British and 46 German planes lost.)

The list of Germans destroyed may go even higher for Monday, the British said as the developing battle between the world's largest air forces was believed here to be a decisive phase of the war.

Germany's objective appeared to be three-fold:

To damage naval harbors and shore establishments in an effort to challenge Britain's sea control of the English Channel.

To weaken Britain's aerial defenses by damaging airdromes, destroying balloon barrages, silencing ground guns and attempting to wear out British pilots by forcing them to maintain 24-hour patrols.

To bolster the morale of the German pepole.

Rail Station Hit, Buildings Destroyed

The attack on the Portsmouth docks met with "little success," the British declared as they acknowledged "several" fatalities, slight damage to jetties and the sinking of two small harbor craft.

The Portsmouth railway station was struck, fires started, and some buildings were ripped apart, but the British said the casualties were slight considering the great number of bombs dropped.

"Slight damage" was inflicted on British airdromes farther inland, and a church and several houses leveled on the Isle of Wight. Civilian damage also was reported along the entire coastline eastward to Dover. Witnesses said most of the bombs fell into the sea or in isolated sections but some smashed houses and knocked civilians sprawling hundreds of yards away.

[The United Press reported its correspondent in Portsmouth told of "considerable" damage to the town with dead and injured.

THE GREAT DELIBERATORS

FRAT MEN: Twelve of our U. S. Senators belong to Greek letter fraternities, or at least own up to it—Bankhead, Hill, Andrews, Pepper, Chandler, Overton, Reynolds, Elmer Thomas, Jim Davis, Green, McKellar and Glass. (Of these, nine are from Dixie.)

Harlan Miller

THE FIVE SHARKS: Five of these twelve are Phi Beta Kappas — which means they were excellent students in college. These are Bankhead, Hill, Pepper, Green and Glass. There must be some more PBK Senators, but they hide it.

* * * *

BROTHER ELK: Oddly enough, two of these five Phi Beta Kappas are also Elks—Pepper and Glass. Other Senators who flaunt their right to wear the elk's tooth are Overton, Reynolds, Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Jim Davis.

* * * *

MOST FRATERNAL: Incidentally, Davis of Pennsylvania is the champion joiner of the Senate. He belongs to no fewer than 17 lodges and orders—including his own baby, the Moose; the Odd Fellows, Eagles, Foresters, Protected Home Circle, Woodmen and the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

"—three who fought twice"

WARRIORS: Four Senators are veterans of both the Spanish-American and the World Wars—Gillette of Iowa, Lundeen of Minnesota, Andrews of Florida and Connally of Texas. They were sergeants in '98, captains in '18. Thirty of the 96 Senators have been soldiers at one time or another . . . Senator Reynolds was captain of his college track team.

* * * *

UNDER FIRE: With "free-masonry" under fire in Germany, Italy and Nazi-dominated France, it's interesting to note that there are at least 12 Masons in the Senate, and probably more—Chandler, Overton, Lundeen, Bennett Clark, Elmer Thomas, Holman, Jim Davis, McKellar, Stewart and Glass. Some don't list their fraternal affiliations; the total of Masons is probably nearer 25. And there probably are 100 Masons in the House.

* * * *

Among the Greek letter men Senator Pepper is the champ, with membership in four fraternities—Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, Kappa Alpha and Phi Alpha Delta . . . Senator Taft is perhaps the only Senator who got degrees from both Yale and Harvard.

* * * *

LAWYER MONOPOLY? There are, believe it or not, at least 54 lawyers in the Senate; but only twelve farmers: Townsend, Hughes, Gillette, Herring, Ellender, Bilbo, Tobey, Bailey, Ed Johnson, Frazier, Holman and Byrd. Some of these are now merely incidental farmers, or like Willkie pitched a little hay as boys.

* * * *

INTELLECTUAL BLOC: Thirteen of the great deliberators have been teachers or educators: Hill, Hughes, Pepper, Reed, Radcliffe, Norris, Lee, McNary, Holman, Green, Elbert Thomas, Schwellenbach and Austin . . . Ten have been journalists: Bailey, Nye, Capper, Reed, Lodge, Byrd, Glass, O'Mahoney, Schwartz and Vandenberg.

* * * *

And five confess to authorship—Downey (economic publications), McCarran (legal opinions), Bennett Clark (Life of J. Q. Adams), Vandenberg (Life of Alexander Hamilton), Reynolds (travel books.)

"Taft is both Y and H"

JACKS OF ALL TRDES: The Senators most versatile in their activities seem to be Hughes (lawyer, farmer, banker, teacher), Tobey (insurance, farming, banking and manufacturing) and Rufe Holman (farming, teaching, bookkeeping, steamboating and paper box manufacture). Most Senators have more than one string for their bows, but prefer senating.

* * * *

Senator Norris' only brother was killed in the Civil War . . . Hughes began to teach at 16 . . . Walsh is the first Democratic Senator from Massachusetts since the Civil War . . . Bennett Clark attended every Democratic national convention since 1900 and has the longest Senatorial biography.

* * * *

Pittman never ran for any office except Senator . . . Holman's family crossed the plains in a covered wagon . . . All of Davis' six children have names beginning with J . . . Sheppard is serving his 38th consecutive year in Congress.

* * * *

There are, of course, many other unusual and interesting facts about Senators which they don't put in their biographies or tell to newspaper reporters. These might be even more illuminating than the ones they reveal. When I find them out I'll let you know.

Roosevelt Ends New England Tour

Defense Progress In Industrial Area Pleases President

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., Aug. 12.—President Roosevelt, collecting first-hand information on the translation of billions of dollars into revitalized fighting equipment, completed tonight his checkup of preparedness progress in the Nation's industrial northeast.

Just before leaving by train for Washington, the President told newsmen that while the progress of the $10,000,000,000 dollar program was not yet up to 100 per cent, it was getting there fast.

He ended his three-day swing through New England with inspection of the submarine base here and the nearby Groton submarine building plant of the Electric Boat Company.

A submarine a month, he said as he returned from Groton, was the objective toward which the plant was striving, adding that the company had plans for building twice as many undersea fighters as ever before.

May Continue Next Week

Mr. Roosevelt said that during the day he had talked to Gov. William H. Vanderbilt, of Rhode Island, and Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, of Connecticut, about organizing a State Guard when and if the National Guard were called up for training. Baldwin informed him that Connecticut already had two State Guard companies training in camp.

As he sailed down Narragansett Bay to complete a cruise along the New England coastline from the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard to New London, the President passed Quonset Point, where the Navy is building one of its biggest air bases to guard the section's closely knit industry and the shipping lanes that spider-web out from the "cross roads of the Atlantic" at Nantucket.

He paused at noonday under the shadow of the 143-year-old U. S. S. frigate, Constellation, in Newport Harbor, to offer another "well done" to the commander of the Newport Training Station.

The possibility developed that he would continue his inspection tour next week, leaving the White House Thursday or Friday for a trip to the 136-year-old Army arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., and to the area where the First Army is engaged in intensive maneuvers.

Mr. Roosevelt early today was welcomed to Rhode Island by Governor Vanderbilt and Senator Green and began almost immediately an inspection of the torpedo manufacturing plant on the 23-acre, closely-guarded Goat Island.

Torpedoes Catch His Eye

He showed keenest interest in two slim ton-and-a-half torpedoes shining in the sun, their noses painted yellow to indicate they were unloaded "duds." Twice he circled the island, first purchased from the Indians by Benedict Arnold's grandfather for 6 pounds and 10 shillings, but now the scene of a $1,385,000 plant expansion.

A 21-gun salute boomed out over Narragansett Bay as an admiral's barge brought the President and his party, among them Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, and Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, to the near-campus-like island home of the Naval War College and the training station.

There the President reviewed the station's 2,100 recruits, chuckling when they broke into the song, "The Beer Barrel Polka," as they marched. He inspected barracks being built to enable the training of 3,000 men in eight weeks.

Mr. Roosevelt told newsmen that the training school carried him back to 1917, when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy and the station was one of the Navy's largest.

The Chief Executive said the station again would became one of the Navy's main training units and that the torpedo station was well up to schedule. The chief task was that of keeping it operating at maximum capacity, he said.

The Navy blimp, K-2, joined the party at sea, en route from Newport to New London, and flew alongside the Potomac for several minutes before heading off to shore.

"He said he thought . . . I was going to be elected."

Although Mr. Hoover did not announce definite plans for the campaign, it is expected that he will deliver at least two speeches in Willkie's behalf. He left Colorado Springs by train this afternoon for Salt Lake City, planning to return tomorrow to West Yellowstone, Mont., on a fishing trip.

Elliott Wishes Him "Good Luck"

Between conferences, Willkie found time to bid goodby to Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, whom he met last night as Roosevelt stopped off here on his way from his home at Fort Worth, Tex., to a fishing trip on the Snake River in Wyoming.

The President's son had wished the Republican nominee "good luck" at parting last night, but the news reel photographers arrived this morning, pleading for a chance to record the unusual meeting.

Mr. Willkie came downstairs as Mr. Roosevelt departed, and they posed together.

Mary Pickford, motion-picture star, and Buddy Rogers, her orchestra leader husband, arrived to greet Willkie.

Miss Pickford and her husband were luncheon guests, together with Gen. Johnson in the Willkie suite. Later, asked whether she would take an active part in the campaign, Miss Pickford said she had not yet been "officially asked" to do so.

Willkie spoke up: "I officially ask you now."

"I officially accept," Miss Pickford said. When she protested that she knew little of politics, Willkie said:

"I was amazed at Miss Pickford's knowledge of governmental affairs and principles."

Willkie's attention was called during the day to a statement by Oliver A. Quayle, jr., treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, deriding the Republican nominee's warning to corporation officials against advertising in the Democratic "campaign book" on the ground that it was illegal.

"Strangest Defense"

"That is one of the strangest defenses I ever heard," Willkie said. "He says in effect he is not afraid because the prosecutor is not going to be elected."

When asked whether it was a fact that Elliott Roosevelt had offered him free time on the Texas radio network which he heads, when the Republican nominee visits that State, Willkie replied in the affirmative.

"Will you accept it?" he was asked.

"Certainly," Willkie replied, "I have no objection to taking an advantage from a Roosevelt."

Willkie Fund Chain Letter Read in House

Chain letters soliciting funds for the "Willkie Campaign Fund, Roosevelt Hotel, New York City" were received in the Washington mails yesterday and were read to the House by Representative Rankin, (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Recalling the epidemic of chain letters that plagued the Postoffice Department a decade ago, the letters that cropped up in District mail boxes urged mailing 25c to $1.20 to the Willkie campaign treasurer and, secondly, "sending this letter over your signature to 10 other good American citizens."

"Let us now prove, as we did in Philadelphia, that we can provide ample funds required to finance the Willkie campaign by contributing the cost of one telegram in place of blank checks," the missives received here said.

They recalled that Republican Presidential candidate Wendell L. Willkie said he would abide by Hatch Act $5,000 limits on campaign fund contributions and called for small donations, "lots of them."

The letters stated also that Willkie had remarked "half humorously, and half seriously" that if everybody who sent telegrams during his nomination would contribute the cost of such a telegram, the Republicans "would have enough money to finance his race.

"That's a practical suggestion and typically Willkie," the letters read.

In a reply to Republican criticism of the Democratic plan to publish a campaign book with paid advertising Rankin said:

"And these people have seen fit to criticize solicitation of paid advertisements for a Democratic campaign book."

Representative Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, promptly denied that "anyone officially connected with the Willkie campaign" had anything to do with the letters.

"Of course we cannot stop people from doing these things," Martin said.

The Postoffice Department took a calm view.

The department has no recourse against chain letters that do not involve the elements of a lottery. In fact, the official said, they are a good thing for the postoffice revenues.

Jackson Warns OnCampaign Book

through its national committee, State committees or local organizations, sells this book, it is encouraging violations of the law. I don't think my party committee wants to encourage violations which can lead to penalties of $5,000 fines. "The only thing to do now is to discontinue the book and obey the law."

The Hatch and Jackson statements constituted a double attack on plans of Flynn to swell the campaign chest by means of the campaign publication, containing advertisements paid for in many cases by corporations who are barred by law from making direct campaign contributions.

Shortly after being chosen to succeed Postmaster Gen. James A. Farley as national chairman, Flynn declared the committee would issue a bigger book with more advertisements than ever before.

On Sunday, Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, warned corporations and their officials that if he is elected President he would "relentlessly prosecute" all purchasers of advertising in the Democratic publication.

Replying in chiding fashion, Flynn, in New York, said Willkie was "perfectly safe" in making his threat "so long as that huge 'if' is in the way." He contended that the advertising contracts for the book were entered into before the Hatch Act's passage and "no advertisements are now being, or will be solicited."

He said it was not intended to place the books on sale but that they would "go to 100,000 or more Democratic speakers and workers like any other campaign book.

Oliver A. Quayle, jr., treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, had said previously it was planned to send the books to State and local organizations which might sell them at 25 cents, the price printed on the cover, if local laws permit.

This brought Attorney General Jackson's warning, saying:

"There has been brought to my attention the statement issued by Oliver B. Quayle, jr., treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, concerning the Democratic Book of 1940. Mr. Quayle is reported to have said that the plan for the distribution of this publication is to send it to the various State and county organizations for redistribution. According to his statement, 'the price of 25 cents appears on the cover, so that any State or local organization, which might be permitted by its own laws to sell such a book, cannot charge more than 25 cents, which covers the cost of handling and postage.'

"Since this statement may be interpreted by others to mean that State laws could make permissible that which a Federal law prohibits, I think it only fair to point out that no such view has been accepted or approved by the Department of Justice."

Vandenberg Lauds Hatch

Senator Hatch's stand was praised on the floor by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who declared Hatch's "impartiality" shows "why he holds the confidence of his colleagues and the country."

The Republican National Committee, meanwhile, reported to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, that it had $285,256.76 cash on hand on June 24, while outstanding obligations totaled $237,272.29. The Democratic committee has not replied to the committee's request for similar data.

Louisiana Fraud Defendants Ask High Court Review

By the United Press

The Supreme Court yesterday was asked to review the convictions of four defendants in Louisiana's mail fraud cases involving charges of corruption on public works projects.

The petitioners were Monte E. Hart, J. Emory Adams, Seymour Weiss and Louis C. Lesage. They were convicted on charges of mail fraud involving a $75,000 check drawn on the Louisiana State University. The conviction was upheld by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appeal brief alleged that none of the defendants or their agents had used the mails in handling the check and that the mailing was done by the banking institutions. Hart, it was said, received the check in person at Baton Rouge and carried it to New Orleans to be cashed. In the course of handling the check, however, there were two mailings by the banks.

Air Lines Seek Excess Profits Tax Exemption

Rare Metal Miners Make Similar Request On Defense Grounds

By the Associated Press

Representatives of air carriers, rare metal mining and investment companies asked complete exemption from the proposed excess profits tax yesterday on grounds ranging from national defense to discrimination.

At the same time, a ship operator and one of the Nation's largest department stores urged that their business losses during the last decade be taken into account. The witnesses appeared at a joint Senate-House committee hearing.

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, of Chicago, president of the Air Transport Association of Aerica, said the air lines' profits were controlled by Federal law, and that they were an auxiliary to national defense.

To apply the tax to the air carriers would "work at cross-purposes with the Civil Aeronautics Act, Gorrell contended, because that act empowers the Civil Aeronautics Authority to fix the earnings of air mail lines and the major lines are air mail carriers.

Metal Workers Seek Exemption

Maurice Thorner, Los Angeles attorney, said that the rare metal miners were attempting to build up an industry for national defense purposes. The tax, he said, virtually would nullify the Strategic Minerals Act, designed to stimulate the mining of certain minerals in this country.

He urged that net income derived from mining minerals be exempted from the tax, naming especially antimony, platinum, tungsten, quicksilver, tin, molybdenum and manganese.

A request for exemption of the so called "closed end" investment companies was made by Alfred Jaretzki, jr., New York attorney. He urged this on the ground that the proposed 25 to 40 per cent excess profits tax would not be levied, under terms of a pending proposal, on the mutual, or "open end" investment companies.

He explained an open-end company as one permitting all stockholders at all times to cash their securities with the company. A closed-end company, he added, provided no special means for stockholders to liquidate their securities.

C. H. Brook, of Akron, Ohio, representing the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., asked that the "consolidated principle" be applied. By this the total earnings of a parent company and subsidiaries would be considered for tax purposes.

K. T. Norris, of the Norris Stamping & Manufacturing Co., of Los Angeles, asserted that he would not have been able to expand his plant for present defense contracts had it not been possible for him to put his profits back into his business. He said he was earning 40 per cent on his invested capital.

"The amount of revenue to be derived by this bill is not worth holding back the defense program," Norris declared.

A similar view was taken by E. D. Sperry, of Newark, N. J., representing the Sperry Products Co., manufacturers of nautical and aircraft equipment. Sperry argued that the tax would cut down money now available for research.

A. C. Nielson, of Chicago, president of A. C. Nielson Co., marketing research organization, opposed any tax based on "invested capital" in connection with the "business service" industry.

Kenneth E. Armstrong, comptroller of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, asked for special consideration because of business changes made during the years 1936-39, contemplated as the base years for determining excess profits.

The Political Arena

Educator, Ex-New Dealers Head 'Democrats for Willkie' Drive

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—Formation of a national "Democrats for Willkie" organization, headed by two former members of the Roosevelt Administration and one of the country's youngest university presidents, was announced today.

VALENTINE

The new organization, said Alan Valentine, 39-year-old president of Rochester University, and executive director of the group, will seek members and support from Democrats and will work "independently of the Willkie organizations, including the Associated Willkie Clubs, although of course we will maintain friendly relations with them."

In addition to Valentine, a national committee of four to direct its activities included John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury under President Roosevelt; Lewis W. Douglas, early New Deal budget director, and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Valentine said the committee planned immediate organization of State bodies, with perhaps one or more States forming regional organizations.

The group will have as its slogan "No Third Term" with the additional cry of "country before party," Valentine explained.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 12 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension advocate, says Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican Vice-Presidential nominee, and Rep. Martin, of Massachusetts, G. O. P. national chairman, have assured him they "favor" his program.

The elderly Californian, speaking at a picnic of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.), asserted that he would urge his followers to vote for the party which would work for his pension plan. He said previously that he would vote for Wendell Willkie.

The Republican National Committee yesterday released a statement by Rep. Bruce Barthon, Republican, New York, forecasting a "sweeping victory" for Willkie in New York State. The prediction was based on the results of a postcard survey conducted among the registered Democrats of Barton's district.

Barton said that " a conservative deduction would be that Mr. Roosevelt will suffer a defection of from a quarter to a third of his New York vote of four years ago.

"Two additional facts of interest were developed. A special mailing was sent to voters with Jewish names. The returns did not vary 1 per cent from the general averages. This would seem to dispose effectively of the myth that there is a 'solid Jewish vote' which will go to Roosevelt. There is no Jewish vote. Jews, like Catholics and Protestants, vote as Americans, not as members of a particular faith.

"Another mailing of cards to voters with Irish names was also revealing. The returns split exactly half and half—50 per cent for Roosevelt, 50 per cent for Willkie. Mr. Roosevelt is going to get a sad surprise from the Irish lads on election day," Barton commented. "They do not like the way Jim Farley has been kicked around, and when they get mad they stay mad."

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 12 (AP).—Withdrawal of Miles H. Draper, Tampa Republican, from the United States Senate race today left the Democratic nominee, Charles O. Andrews, of Orlando, without opposition in the November general election and State G. O. P. leaders said no other candidate would be placed in the field.

Pestilence Feared In Louisiana Flood

Additional Thousands Of Victims Evacuated; Inoculations Ordered

By the Associated Press

Lafayette, La., Aug. 12.—Authorities began burning thousands of head of drowned livestock today in order to prevent pestilence among the estimated 50,000 victims of Louisiana's worst flood in more than a decade.

Meanwhile, additional thousands of persons were evacuated from the flooded flatlands southwest of here aboard the same barges used to haul forage in for stock that managed to reach high ground.

The stench of dead animals forced the further evacuation of several areas, where the waters were receding, but which authorities believed would require a week or more to rehabilitate after the waters fully subside.

The 1,313 residents of Gueydan, still completely inundated, were all taken out today, as were all the approximately 6,000 homeless in Crowley, hardest hit of the entire area.

State Police Superintendent Steve Alford, in charge of evacuation, sent to Baton Rouge for additional police reinforcements as the number of refugees increased. Even police cadets in training were mustered.

Nearly 6,000 refugees had been brought in here tonight, so crowding all public schools, colleges and other public buildings that police began commandeering dance halls and night clubs for housing. Nearly half the homeless came barefoot, their feet swollen and cracked from wading.

Wholesale inoculations against typhoid and diphtheria were ordered.

Find Highways Blocked

Two of them, Nathaniel Wilson and Leo Wilhelm, arrived yesterday by automobile after innumerable detours around highways covered by flood waters or blocked by uprooted trees. They joined Helen Wade and Glen Whisler, who left here Sunday night by train.

Capt. Johnston's plane, which left Miami, Fla., at 9:30 a. m., was the first to fly over wind-blasted Beaufort, S. C., where the hurricane tore through a lumber yard and scattered timber over the countryside.

"From the air they looked like match sticks spread all over the ground," Johnston said.

The entire area, he said, showed hardly a sign of life. There was water covering every inch of low ground, but here and there a stray car could be seen picking its way through the wreckage in hilly territory.

Causeways and bridges in southeastern South Carolina were washed out and trees sprayed across highways. Power plants were knocked out.

The Weather Bureau announced there was no further danger from the storm. Heavy rains were forecast throughout the area, however, to continue Tuesday.

Charleston Power Turned On

After more than 24 hours without them, Charleston had its power and communication facilities restored tonight. Lights burned over most of the city and debris was rapidly being cleared away.

Directing the task of "digging out" was youthful Gov. Burnet R. Maybank, native Charlestonian, who earlier in the day made a hurried trip to the town of Beaufort, south of here, which still was without power and communication facilities.

Maybank said the people of Beaufort needed chlorine badly to prevent water contamination, and also food.

City officials estimated damage to Beaufort alone would run above $100,000.

There was no material damage at the Charleston Navy Yard, Fort Moultrie, or at Parris Island, the Marine base.

Several cottages were reported damaged or destroyed at Pawleys Island, near Georgetown.

Although Charleston's streets were strewn with mud, debris, tin from the roofs of houses and fallen trees, there was no known loss of life here or at the surrounding beach resorts. The resort of Folly Island, 10 miles south of here, seemed to have suffered worst. Russell McGowan, Charleston attorney, estimated the damage on the island alone to be $1,000,000.

Industrial Plant Suffers

Telephone communication was still out with the Isle of Palms and Sullivans Island—they are in the opposite direction from Folly—but those who visited the areas reported damage was widespread but not heavy.

In and near Charleston several industrial plants, school buildings, and churches were badly damaged. The loss to one industrial plant alone was put at a quarter million dollars.

Farther south, Sea Island and St. Simons, popular Georgia resorts, and Jekyll Island, exclusive winter resort, escaped with slight damage.

Hundreds of telephones were out of order in Savannah, and long distance calls to all points in the stricken regions were subjected to long delays. Many of Savannah's beautiful oaks, sycamores and palms were uprooted or broken. One reporter said most of the trees left standing were stripped bare of leaves.

Several Georgia sections suffered crop losses. Corn was blown down in Jenkins County, trees damaged and train service delayed.

Power was off at Waynesboro. Local lines were reported out for a time at Augusta, Dublin, Gordon and Macon. Communication lines beyond Millen and Statesboro from Augusta were out.

TWO WAYS OF FINDING OUT—Four young residents of Charleston, S. C. (top) lay against the wind that swept the town. Lower—Marian Crane, Elizabeth, N. J., coed, who, with 18 other passengers on the Eastern Airline plane piloted by Capt. Don Johnston (inset), yesterday flew over the coastal storm area. Johnston landed his plane at Savannah, Ga., and Charleston on the way to Washington from Miami and brought to Red Cross officials here the first direct report from the stricken section.

Food, Medical Supplies Ample In Storm Zone, Says Pilot

The first direct word out of storm-battered Charleston, S. C., came to Washington yesterday from the pilot of a 19-passenger Eastern Airliner, the first passenger plane to land in Charleston and Savannah, Ga., since the hurricane.

Food and medical supplies already in the cities are ample to care for the emergency, reported Capt. Don Johnston, the pilot.

But with power facilities damaged in both cities, Savannah will remain blacked out for three days and Charleston for at least another day, he said. Telegraph and telephone lines, he reported, are down, and the lack of electric power has eliminated most radio communication.

Partial communication with Charleston has been maintained over one crowded naval radio station and through amateur broadcasters.

Johnston reported he was informed two persons were killed in the South Carolina city of 75,000, but Red Cross officials here said they had been unable to verify the report.

Four Washington Red Cross workers are on duty in Charleston.

They are Nathaniel Wilson, Helen Wade, Glen Whisler and Leo Wilhelm.

half pint a day."

Charging a monopoly in the distribution of relief milk, Schulte questioned the control of the supply by Chestnut Farms Dairy and told the House:

"I have asked members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association why such a situation was sanctioned. I was told by a member of the organization that 'our pigs have got to have the surplus milk.'"

In other words, Schulte said, the pigs on the farms of Maryland and Virginia come ahead of nursing mothers nad children of Washington.

Schulte was a member of a special subcommittee of the House District Committee which a year ago investigated the local milk situation. eH introduced a bill, now on the House calendar, which would open the Washington milk market to milk and cream produced outside the so-called Washington "milkshed."

Schulte took the floor of the House on scheduled District day, but when no District legislation was called up he asked for time to discuss "a vital District subject."

"Those associated and affiliated with this thing ought to be ashamed of themselves, picking on innocent mothers and children who cannot afford to protect themselves," Schulte said. "There is only one place people of the District can look for help, and that is the Congress."

He pointed out that Washington residents had no say in national representation and were forced to bring their troubles individually to Congress.

Schulte threatened to revive his bill, which he has contended would destroy monopolistic control of Washington's milk supply.

Russians Fail To Oust Lith Envoy in Berlin

Porter Pushes Five Soviet Aides From Door With His Stomach

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 12.—In the tragic irony of some of the modern European developments there is a dash of comedy which is no less amusing because of the seriousness of the event in the background.

Such a situation exists now in Berlin, where members of the Lithuanian Legation are refusing to evacuate the legation despite earnest efforts on the part of the Russians to evict them.

Both the Latvian and the Estonian legations here have capitulated to the Russians upon the latter's demand. The Russians, however, have not yet informed the German government that Lithuania has become one of the republics in the U. S. S. R., so the Lithuanian diplomats here are still accredited to the Reich's government and enjoy the extraterritorial status.

Last Friday two members of the Russian Embassy called at the Lithuanian Legation and asked to speak to Kazys Skirpa, the Lithuanian Minister here. They got as far as the counselor of the legation who, upon their insistence, telephoned Skirpa. The latter asked what it was the two gentlemen wished to speak about with him. He was told they were from the Russian Embassy and wanted to speak to him relative to his evacuation of the legation premises.

Skirpa's answer was merely that the two Russians were to be shown to the door as quickly as possible and informed that they were not to return.

Undeterred, both Russians returned the next afternoon. They got as far as the reception clerk, when they were requested to leave the premises immediately.

Yesterday morning five Russians, three of whom, judging from their appearance, were men who have devoted much time to the cultivation of their muscles, arrived at the Lithuanian Legation.

The Lithuanians, however, were on deck, prepared for anything. The five Russians forced an entrance into the corridor of the Lithuanian Legation—and got no farther. For the porter of the legation, a Falstaffian German who is employed by the Lithuanians, felt it his duty to protect them, even though his antagonists were Russian allies of the Reich. Loudly puffing, the German porter pushed all five Russians from the door with his stomach—a well-rounded, carefully cultivated, appendage against which the Russians, including the three athletic ones, seemed unable to think of defense.

Last night, however, the Lithuanian Minister called up the German police and informed them he was being constantly annoyed by foreigners "Who, I think, are Russians," and requesting police protection.

As he is an accredited diplomat, Skirpa was sent two policemen who are now guarding the legation.

Borglum Here To Urge Funds For Sculpture

Artist Will Remind Congress $318,000 Is Needed for Project

While the Government is appropriating billions for national defense, there comes to Congress the word that other things go on, too.

For example: Gutzon Borglum, creator of the Mount Rushmore Memorial in South Dakota's Black Hills, is in Washington—to see that his project isn't forgotten.

BORGLUM

He desires assurance that Congress, under pressure of defense spending, won't forget the approximately $318,000 needed to complete the gigantic enterprise he began.

The great heads of Jefferson, Washington and Lincoln are complete, the sculptor said yesterday, while work on the head of Theodore Roosevelt will be finished by midwinter.

Borglum came here from New York. Work, he said, has begun on the final phase of the memorial—involving the carving of a hall of records, 100 feet long, 80 feet wide and 34 feet high within the granite of the mountain. He said he would hasten from here to Mount Rushmore. He is stopping for two days at the Mayflower.

Cooperatives To Meet Today

More than 50 Maryland farmers' organizations will be represented at the University of Maryland today at the first "cooperative institute" held in the State.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, dean and director of the university extension service, said the institute would consider the problems and conditions faced by farm co-ops as a result of changing world situations.

The institute will meet three days considering the best methods for farms to purchase most cheaply and sell in the best markets.

Policeman's Beating Laid To Short Force

Precinct Reported Lacking Enough Men For Patrols by Pairs

Lack of sufficient force to enable men to patrol in pairs was blamed last night for injuries suffered Sunday night by a rookie patrolman attached to the Thirteenth Precinct.

HENSON

L. R. Henson, 26, the policeman, was recovering in Garfield Hospital from a beating administered with his own baton. The weapon allegedly was wielded by Richard Reeves, 24, a 200-pound colored man, who, it was said, took it from Henson when the latter attempted to arrest him for throwing rubbish into the street. Reeves last night was recovering in Freedman's Hospital from a pistol wound in his stomach, caused when Henson discharged his gun in self-defense. Reeves is under technical arrest.

The neighborhood of Seventh and T streets northwest, where the incident occurred, is said by police to be one of the "toughest beats" in the District. Lieut. Charles J. P. Weber, of the Thirteenth Precinct, said last night, "There is no question about it, we should have two men on the beats in this precinct. However, we haven't enough men to go around."

The present force for the precinct, including officers and patrolmen, numbers 85. Some time ago, it was reported, a request had been made for from 15 to 20 additional men. This number, said Lieut. Weber, would permit the doubling-up that is thought advisable.

Lions Clubs List Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of the Takoma Park and Silver Spring (Md.) Lions clubs featuring a "Ladies' Nite" dinner and dance has been set for August 20 at the Indian Spring Country Club, Colesville road, Donald D. Lamond, president of the Takoma group, announced yesterday.

Robert Lohr has been appointed chairman with J. Arthur Walters and W. M. Schoenfelder assisting. J. Milton Derrick has been named chairman of arrangements for Takoma Park members who will attend the moonlight excursion, August 28, being sponsored by all the Lions clubs in the Washington area.

1 Killed in Crash Of Dive Bomber

Santa Monica, Aug. 12 (AP).—A big bombing plane, designed for war use in Europe, crashed and burned today on a test flight, killing Mechanic John Parks. Pilot Robert Bruch and Flight Engineer Paul Dennis jumped from the plane, a Douglas DB-7, in their parachutes.

The DB-7 is a twin-motored dive-bomber similar to the one that crashed here in January, 1939, killing its pilot and injuring a French army officer who was riding as an observer.

House Group Favors Calling Out Guard

Draft Will Make U. S. Militaristic Nation, Norris Tells Senate.

reemployment an "unfair labor practice" unless the employer's circumstances had so changed as to make it "impossible or unreasonable" for him to rehire the man.

Norris Fears Dictatorship

Under the terms of the amended exemption clause, any Guardsman or Reservists with dependents who has no other means of support for such dependents other than his wages, may resign within 20 days of being called into active service. The original proviso did not provide for Reservists and included only a wife and children as dependents.

Meanwhile, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, submitted as an amendment to the draft bill a recommendation of the War Department some months ago to raise Army enlisted pay. The proposal, which proponents urged would stimulate recruiting, was accepted by Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Chairman Sheppard of the Military Affairs Committee, in an effort to win support for the bill.

In another defense development, Robert P. Patterson, new Assistant Secretary of War, in an address before the Army Industrial College, said it will take at least a year for American industry to be consolidated for defense output, "and a year," he added, "is a luxury we may never enjoy."

Senator Norris told the Senate that compulsory military training in time of peace "cannot long prevail in a democracy." The proposed change, he stated, "is going to lead us into what we complain about in other nations—a dictatorship."

He declared that if the United States adopts conscriution the same thing will happen to the United States adopts conschiption the same Italy and Russia.

"Chip on Our Shoulders"

"We will put a chip on our shoulders," he stated. "Do not get away from the idea that if we have this permanent army always standing they will find a way to fight as armies of dictators have done throughout the history of the world."

The legislator pictured a Nation changed fundamentally, if the draft is adopted, with "women working in the fields to support a huge military machine" and a populace trained for one thing—"how to fight and how to kill."

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, floor manager and coauthor of the bill, took issue with Norris. He declared selective conscription would not bring "militarism" and dictatorship, but is the "only democratic way to provide an adequate national defense."

"It recognizes the obligation of all to serve, and to adequately train for that service," Burke stated.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, charged that the Army supports the measure because the "scheme will make colonels out of captains, and brigadiers out of majors."

Wheeler read a speech made by Secretary of War Stimson in 1914, declaring that Germany could land 390,000 men on our shores in 16 days if it set forth on an invasion of this country.

"Any man who would make such a statement isn't fit to be Secretary of War," he said.

Senator Norris also ridiculed suggestions of an invasion of the United States as "preposterous," declaring there were not enough transports in Europe to carry the troops over here. Majority Leader Barkley answered that Hitler could build transports before we can build battleships to stop him.

Vandenberg Attacks Bill

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, also attacked the draft bill, declaring the Administration had not given voluntary recruiting a fair trial. He said he would support conscription if the voluntary system is shown to have failed.

"Why has not the President issued a ringing call for volunteers?" he asked. "Why have not developments in Europe caused the Army to step up efforts to gain recruits? Why this sudden call for a wartime draft? I confess this situation is wholly mystifying to me."

Senator Burke said that a recruiting drive such as Vandenberg advocated would mean "organizing a war spirit."

"I do not think we can properly wait to find out if by ballyhoo, bands and white feathers we can raise an army," he stated.

Norwegian Royalty Off to U. S., Invited By Roosevelt

Stockholm, Aug. 12 (AP).—Crown Princess Martha of Norway and her three children en route to the United States aboard an American ship at the invitation of President Roosevelt, the Norwegian Legation here announced today.

The legation said they boarded the ship at Petasmo, in far northern Norway.

(The American troop transport American Legion arrived at Petsamo August 5 under orders of President Roosevelt to bring out Americans in Scandinavia. Presumably, the American Legion already has started the return trip home.)

Crown Prince Olav now is in England, where he accompanied King Haakon when the Allies withdrew from Norway.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Where Waves of German Planes Rained Bombs

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"TOTAL WAR"—Determined to give Britain no letup from air atack, Germany yesterday sent new waves of bombers across the English Channel. Objectives were the great naval base of Portsmouth and nearby Portland (1), where Berlin claimed heavy damage was inflicted, and the coast in the vicinity of Dover (2). Barrage-balloon defenses were attacked greatly hampered, they said, because of extensive destruction at Portsmouth, Portland, Dover and the Isle of Wight.

The Germans appeared to be bombing the British coast section by section, since the attacks Monday were just north of Weymouth and Portland, objects of Sunday's forays.

Barely an hour after the battle was resumed yesterday morning, German fighters radioed back the British were showing evidences of the Sunday raids by refusing to come out and fight.

Instantly, German observers jumped to the conclusion: "We already have established air superiority over the Channel."

"This is the first sign of Broken British resistance," they declared.

British Denying Dodging Fight

[British circles indignantly denied the R. A. F. was avoiding fights, and a New York Times London correspondent said of Monday's battles, "the British defenders concentrated on Junkers (divebombers) and bombers, and apparently evaded Messerschmitt fighter escorts."]

"The English are trying to avoid fights," a spokesman for German pilots said. "Their pursuiters open fire at long range, then withdraw.

"This enables us to go to work on British sea bases. For instance, we swept down on Portland and Weymouth with ease, firing oil tanks, bombing the harbors and shipyards and swung down on convoys bringing in supplies through the Channel bottleneck or painfully hugging the shore of the North Sea."

Attack Balloon Barrage

DNB declared 40 British planes were downed in a single battle today over Portsmouth.

"Then came a quick attack against a balloon barrage near Dover," it said. "In this action several balloons were brought down and antiaircraft batteries bombed.

"A third attack was launched against a convoy east of Margate. Several merchant vessels totaling 10,000 tons were sunk while others were set afire.

"The fourth objective was the British airport at Manston, where bombs hit runways, shelters and hangars, leaving a veritable path of destruction.

"A Hurricane unit at Manston was surprised when it was about to start. Four Hurricanes were destroyed while still on the ground and three were shot out of the air."

"Our units in this encounter all returned safely.

Throwing fresh pilots into the battle, the Germans conducted their operations on a "free chase" basis, which was interpreted as meaning they could strike where they pleased.

As the fight progressed, its early stages indicated the type of battle military observers have expected for a long time to be launched in the Battle for England.

Nazi Planes Rain Bombs on All Parts of England

[German claims that the Nazi air force had British flyers on the run met prompt official ridicule, International News Service said.

["The past record of the R. A. F. should be sufficient indication that it never has and is not now avoiding combat."

[It was also announced officially that another fake German Red Cross rescue plane was shot down in Sunday's fighting. These planes, for which the Germans claim immunity from attack as mercy planes, actually fulfill reconnaissance duties, it was claimed.]

Ersatz Gas Plant Is Blown Up

Official communiques also disclosed the British were continuing to attack air fields and oil plants in Germany and German-held territory.

In Sunday's attacks a synthetic gasoline plant at Dortmund "blew up with a violent explosion and the plant at Kastrop-Rauxel was fired."

The R. A. F. also bombed plants at Gelsenkirchen and Wanne-Eickel, oil storage vats at Cherbourg, airdromes at Dinard and Caen and the seaplane slipway at Brest. Explosives were rained also on German occupants of the British island of Guernsey in the Channel.

Military observers have said for weeks that German artillery experts have been speeding work on emplacements for huge 1940 models of the old World War Big Bertha which could shell England from Nazi-held positions on the coast of France.

Some such emplacements reportedly have been bombed by British raiders.

As long ago as June 4, Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press bureau at Berlin, reported that on a trip to the German channel front he had seen giant guns which German officers told him could shell London.

He said London was about 90 miles from possible emplacements for such guns. That is about 14 miles farther than the World War Big Berthas lobbed their huge shells into Paris.

Guns Shoot 180 miles

However, other points in southeastern England would offer much shorter range.

From Calais, England's chalk cliffs are only 22 miles across the channel. Dover and Folkestone are within 30-mile range.

Lochner said both German and Soviet military scientists have boasted of guns that could shoot 100 miles.

The 142-ton "Big Bertha" shelled Paris from a distance of 76 miles from March 23 to August 9, 1918, and 303 projectiles were fired in that period, 256 persons were killed and considerable property damage done before the French located the emplacement in the Forest of Coucy.

The 264-pound shells required 3 minutes to travel the distance.

Duce Beats Caesar, Swerves Tiber

Rome, Aug. 12 (AP).—Premier Mussolini pushed two levers today and changed the course of the Tiber River—a job Julius Caesar conceived but never completed.

The levers set off a blast which turned the river into a shorter channel, eliminating a 3-mile horseshoe curve. The old channel will be used as a seaplane base. (Something Caesar didn't think of presumably.)

Litchfield Retires As Goodyear Head

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 12 (AP).—P. W. Litchfield announced today his retirement September 1 as president of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., but the 65-year-old executive will continue as board chairman.

Edwin J. Thomas, executive vice president, will succeed Litchfield as president.

Litchfield, who joined Goodyear 40 years ago, said he would continue to be the senior active executive and primarily responsible for the creation of policy.

THE NEWS THAT'S TOO BIG FOR THE BILLBOARDS!

This month—on billboards throughout this territory—the Gulf poster below is on display. Because the news it tells is important to all motorists, we have taken this opportunity to give you the full facts.

ONE GLANCE AT THIS POSTER has probably told you that both Good Gulf and Gulf No-Nox gasolines have been stepped up. But what the billboard couldn't explain is that this is not a symbolic picture but an accurately drawn graph!

This chart shows you the relative boosts in anti-knock value—shows by direct comparison, how much these two great fuels have been improved. What's more, these improvements are not the kind that show up only in scientific laboratory tests. They're step ups that can make a real difference in the performance of your motor!

The step up in regular-priced Good Gulf gives it an extra performance "plus." The improvement in Gulf No-Nox—which was already knockproof under all normal operating conditions—makes it tower above its old remarkable high. NO REGULAR GASOLINE—NOT ONE—CAN COMPARE WITH GULF NO-NOX!

Introduce your car to one of these stepped-up fuels today! They're available at the Good Gulf dealer's in your neighborhood.

Scalise 'Not Saying Anything' About Defense as Trial Starts

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

GEORGE SCALISE ANN KAYE

Scalise appeared yesterday in a New York court to face trial on charges he stole more than $60,000 from a building employes' union, of which he was formerly president. Miss Kaye, his secretary, who is expected to be called as a State witness, also appeared in court

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—George Scalise, usually voluble, sat silently in General Sessions Court today as his trial began on charges of stealing $60,087 from the Building Service Employes International Union while he was its president.

During the day-long questioning of prospective jurors from a special panel of 250 veniremen, Scalise, who resigned in April as head of the A. F. of L. union of 60,000 members, parried all questions about his defense with a laconic, "I'm not saying anything."

His attorney, Martin W. Littleton, said during questioning of a juror that the 43-year-old defendant "may or may not take the stand." He indicated the trial would last two or three weeks.

The 60-count indictment, longest ever returned in the court, charged Scalise with padding expense vouchers and making false entries in the union's books after he became its head in May, 1937. It carried 35 charges of grand larceny, six of common-law larceny, eight of embezzlement and 11 of forgery.

If convicted on all counts, Scalise could be sentenced to a maximum of 545 years in State prison.

As a youth he served a prison term of four and one-half years for white slavery, but there was doubt whether that conviction, obtained in the Federal courts, would make him a second offender in the State courts. As a second offender, the maximum sentence possible would be 1,090 years.

Among those in the crowded courtroom was Ann Kaye, Scalise's secretary. She was arrested in April as a material witness when Scalise was first held on charges of conspiracy and extorting $97,150 from New York hotels and labor contracting firms.

The larceny indictment was returned in May. He has been free in $45,000 bail.

Oil Company Executive Quits

ago that he was living on an estate at suburban Scarsdale, the State motor vehicle department began an investigation of his automobile registration and driver's license. Last Friday it revoked both on the grounds the applications contained false statements.

In the hearing, a Texas Co. official testified the company had paid for the car used by Dr. Westrick, but had expected the German official to repay for it.

At a press conference August 1, the Norwegian-born Capt. Rieber asserted he had directed a subordinate to help Dr. Westrick get a driver's license and had offered him the use of a company car.

"I did that and considered it good business," said Rieber, adding that Westrick, a German Supreme Court lawyer, was his German attorney and a lawyer who had represented "some of the largest American companies" in Germany.

Fought His Way Up

Rieber's 35-year career with the Texas Corporation was fraught with stormy adventure in which the one-time skipper of a little tanker rose to direct the vast international oil empire.

Up from scratch he fought his way like the storied successes of another century, yet he was sensitive enough about his given name to flare up in anger at its mention. The company announcement of his resignation today referred to him simply as "T. Rieber."

At 15, he ran away from his mountain home in Voss, Norway, and shipped on a sailing vessel for San Francisco.

Three years later he was master of an oil tanker and in 1905 found himself working for the Texas company when it purchased the ship.

In another three years he had saved up $6,000 and was sick of the sea. To keep him from leaving the organization, an official gave him a man-sized land job—fit for Rieber's growing ambition.

He was set with Texaco from then on.

Traveled Over the World

Winning and holding various high posts through many changes in management, in 1935 he became chairman of the board.

But instead of sitting back in his elaborate office, he traveled the world over to see for himself what was going on.

And, despite the depression years, he put through three daring deals that were and are the talk of the industry.

He opened up the giant Barco concession, deep in the Colombian jungle, and made it pay.

He negotiated with the Standard Oil Co. of California and won Texaco a half-interest in the lucrative Bahrein oil field in the Persian Gulf.

He gambled in supplying General Franco with oil in the Spanish civil war, risking $8,000,000, but coming out on top again.

Today, at 58, he is a distinguished appearing, graying man who still talks the rough and ready language of the oil fields.

His wife died two years ago, but his son, Harold, is following his father in the oil business and his daughter, Ruth, goes with him on many of his globe-girdling jaunts.

No Successor Named

No successor to Rieber was named but it was indicated that W. S. S. Rodgers, president, would take over his duties, at least temporarily.

Rieber, 58, had been associated with Texas Corporation since 1905 and was elected chairman in August, 1935.

The company statement said Rieber had contracted in Germany for a number of tank vessels, several of which were delivered before the war, and two of which with the permission of the British government, were delivered after war was declared.

"Mr. Rieber stated that Texas Corporation had not a cent of permanent investment in Germany and had not delivered a single barrel of oil, either directly or indirectly, to the German government since before the present war started.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Watch That White Line And Hold Speed Down!

'They Drive by Night' Pays Off Truckers; Be Careful How You Pronounce 'Pago Pago;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

THERE IS ROMANCE, adventure and more than a touch of the seamy side of life in "They Drive By Night," the Warner Brothers screen play that will be seen next at the Earle Theater.

A little-known aspect of life on the open road is made the basis of this vivid and, at times, slightly bawdy tale of he rough-and-ready lads who bowl the heavy freight trucks over the Nation's highways. They go high-balling down the pikes to meager rewards, hazardous risks and occasional death, always with the thought in the back of their minds that things can't go on like this forever and that eventually each will get his "break." Each of them eventually does, but more often than not the "break" is on the wrong side.

BELL

Like soldiers in a deadly no-man's-land, these knights who spend their nights at the wheel entertain vague and nebulous dreams of wives, homes, normal living and an occasional night in bed, instead of grinding out the endless miles for the profit of others than themselves. For the Fabrini Brothers things work out a little differently than for the rest. One rises to a high executive post through the murderous perfidy of his boss' wife; the other smashes his future in a crash that causes the loss of his right arm. Developments then lead to the courtroom and a surprising denouement, in which the perfidious wife betrays her sole guilt in a sudden collapse of her mind.

Not a gentle tale, "They Drive by Night," nevertheless, is a fast-moving and gripping one. It is played right up to the hilt, as the saying goes, by a cast unfailingly adapted to lending this sort of turgid melodrama its greatest possible values. George Raft, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, Roscoe Karns, Alan Hale, Henry O'Neill, John Litel, Gale Page, Paul Hurst and George Tobias are among those who do most to keep the spectator's clutch glued tight to the arm of his chair.

By far the most effective portrayal in "They Drive by Night" is contributed by Ida Lupino, who, after many seasons of inconsequential roles, here takes her place among the cinema's most forceful emotional actresses. It is slight cause for wonder that after viewing her performance in this part, the Warner Brothers should have handed her a new, long-term contract. While few of the zippier lines are allotted Miss Lupino, the dialogue snaps and crackles with speeches that must have caught the Will H. Hays office with its deaf ear turned toward the sound track. "Torrid Zone" was only tepid in comparison.

So anyone connected with any branch of "show business" is supposed to lead a life consisting of just "one continuous round of pleasure." It isn't work, in the layman's view. Merely going to shows and having a lot of fun—whether one feels like it or not. The point came up a night or two ago when we were honking laryngeally at "Red" Skelton and his charming wife and stage partner, Edna (and why not ((Redna")) Stillwell. Red remarked in passing that we were not the only one with a Grade A summer chest cold. "I'm having fun, too," he confided. "Since opening at the Earle this trip, I have lost an even 13 pounds. I'm looking for the guy that made the crack that 'the show must go on'." That makes two of us. And by the way, how is your own bubonic plague coming along?

With attendance and interest both mounting, the Willard Roof Players production of "The Night of January 16" is romping into its third week tonight atop the Willard Hotel, with the usual performances scheduled for tomorrow and Thursday nights, and the Roof Tavern Club hard by for entr' acte refereshment. The cast is one of Washington's finest and the juries, selected nightly from among the audience, have been such as any real court might be proud of. The verdict in the Andre Karen murder trial has been "not guilty" most of the time—which is all right with us.

Herbert Campbell, assistant manager of Loew's Columbia, is honeymooning, in case you have missed him. He and Miss Elizabeth Kyser, cashier at the Trans-Lux, were married a few days ago. They met several years ago, when Mr. Campbell was chief of ushers at the Capitol and the then Miss Kyser one of the Capitol's high priestesses of the ticket wickets. Congratulations.

"Rose Marie," another top-notch musical, will follow "One Night of Love," at the Little Theater, at a late public preview tonight and begin its regular "all-day grind" engagement tomorrow morning. This is more than any mere Nelson Eddy-Jeanette MacDonald vehicle. Its cast also includes James Stewart, Allan Jones, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray, Una O'Connor, Herman Bing and Gilda Gray—remember her?

'What a Life' A 'Natural' for Cross Roaders

By Richard L. Coe

One of the happiest notions in summer play-picking plumps Henry Aldrich and "What a Life" onto the Cross Roads Theater stage. Choosing a play for our barn stages requires the wisdom of Solomon and to anyone who has ever thought about it Clifford Goldsmith's high school comedy must have seemed a natural. With Gordon Gray as their Henry Aldrich, the Cross Roaders last night showed a laughing house they had a natural.

For this clean, rollicking adventure gains further delight in a setting of fresh country air and a neat barn theater. And when a play is both roisterously funny and spick and span, well, there's hope for our wicked world yet.

Surely by now you know Henry. It was "What a Life" that introduced him on the stage to a career that has gone on to include one film, another coming up and a weekly radio top-spot. He's the boy you always felt like. Everything Henry did was wrong. He had trouble with his teachers, with the school bully and his girl. By being a Princeton man, Phi Beta Kappa, too, even Henry's father was against him.

Gordon Gray is Henry to the ultimate puppy-dog expression. Having already awarded Mr. Gray one of our stoutly guarded gold-plated cowbells for his frightened reporter in the Cross Roaders' earlier "The Skull," there's nothing much this department can do further except offer him another for his own interpretation, something obviously not copied from Ezra Stone, Eddie Braken or Jackie Cooper.

Brisk, Brimming Fun

There are neat and natural performances from other players, too. Phyllis Warner, who was the autograph fiend in "A Woman's a Fool," is cast practicallly to type as Henry's Barbara, a lass who must be a real Central High School girl to make the puzzled president of the junior class seem so real. Bud Firestone, as the nasty George Bigelow, is so much the bully you'd like to kick him for his swagger, sock him for that eternal chewing gum.

Scattered through Henry's life are dim-witted adults pursuing their one-track roads with all the intensity of real life: the athletic teacher who bellows such a healthy "good morning;" the spineless history instructor, the distraught music teacher and the harassed principal. Of these adults, L. Zaff Rogers gives a most convincing performance as Principal Bradley. Laura Allen (whose make-up should be softened) is effective as the secretary.

But it's Henry Aldrich's show, with a barrel of help from Author Goldsmith, that makes "What a Life" such brisk and brimming fun.

The New Yorker

By Humphrey Bogart
Screen Actor

[Leonard Lyons, regular conductor of this column, is vacationing.]

THE OLD CLICHE about truth being stranger than fiction is certainly trite but true. I've played many a bad man on the screen in my time, but none could ever compare in color or bravado to Al Jennings, my favorite real life "bad man." Jennings is 76 years old now and is a model citizen. I met him for the first time a couple of years ago when he was serving as technical advisor on "The Oklahoma Kid," in which I appeared with Jimmy Cagney. Jennings, one of the most famous gunmen of the old West, killed 23 men during his career of outlawry and murdered his first victim when he was 14. He scoffs at the "badman" lore that has been built up to glamorize the pioneer West and has always insisted that neither he nor most of the other famous "desperadoes" ever killed a man without justification. The first time he killed a man was to avenge his best friend, who had been shot in the back. At another time he killed a Spanish don to save the life of O. Henry, who was one of his best friends.

JENNINGS FIRST met O. Henry in Honduras while a fugitive from justice. They took an immediate liking to each other and formed a fast friendship that endured until O. Henry's death.

THE STORY of Jennings' celebration of the Fourth of July in Honduras with O. Henry has been immortalized in the latter's story, "The Fourth in Salvador." The two men were doing some sturdy drinking when suddenly some shots were fired outside their door. O. Henry bitterly announced, "Gentlemen, the natives are trying to steal our copyrighted Fourth." He and Jennings dashed outside, grabbed a couple of natives from their horses and rode away, shooting and shouting, "Reinforcements!" The next day, the governor called at the American consulate and said he wanted to thank the American patriots for saving the republic!

FROM THERE, Jennings and O. Henry went to Mexico City. One night they attended a party and an enchanting senorita started to flirt with O. Henry, who followed suit. The senorita's escort warned O. Henry to staya clear of his girl, but he continued to pursue his suit with the enchantress. The don smacked O. Henry across the face with a glove. O. Henry, blindly enraged, pelted him with his fists. The don countered by drawing a stiletto and had it pointed straight for O.Henry's throat. Jennings came to his rescue in the nick of time by firing his gun off in the don's face.

JENNINGS, who was one of the fastest shots in the West, was a bare stripling when he killed his first man. It happened in 1874. He had run away from home and had been befriended by a fellow named Jim Stanton, who took him in at the 101 ranch and taught him everything from riding horses to shooting a gun. One day a man from another ranch had an argument with Stanton and shot him in the back. He escaped, but from that day on Jennings had him tagged for vengeance. He finally tracked him down in a saloon in Prosidio County, Tex. Jennings was only 14, and he could hardly reach the top of the bar, but, undaunted, he went inside and asked for soda pop! His future victim pushed him away sneering, "Go home to your mother." Stanton had taught him never to cuss or get mad while engaging in the preliminaries for a gunfight. He stood with his thumbs hanging in his belt. Both he and the other mans suddenly reached for their guns. Jennings was a fraction of a second faster than his opponent.

JENNINGS DEBUNKS most of the legends about the desperadoes of the West. Take the one about the "two-gun men." None of the so-called bad men ever used two guns at the same time, as is so often seen in the movies. They only shot one gun at a time. The only reason they carried two guns was to be able to have a second round of shots. Jennings himself never carried more than five bullets. The saying used to go, "After you've shot five turns, it's time to run anyhow!"

JENNINGS SAYS that no man could ever kill another unflinchingly, as pulp writers describe such things. Every time a man makes up his mind to draw his gun, his eyes automatically twitch—it never fails. The favored target was a man's neck and not his chest. Most of the men in the West wore metal breastplates and a shot at a man's heart would have bounced right off his chest.

THE LAW finally caught up with Jennings and he was given a life sentence. President McKinley commuted the sentence to five years in the Ohio State Penitentiary. After a brief stay at Leavenworth, Jennings was finally given a full pardon by Teddy Roosevelt, and his citizenship was restored on the promise that he'd go straight. After his release, he turned to the practice of law and once ran for Governor of Oklahoma, but was—he claims—cheated out of the election. Jennings has faithfully kept his promise to Teddy Roosevelt. "I've been honest for 30 years now," he frequently remarks, "and very lonesome!"

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 12 (INS).—A single line of a Dante poem, "I Have Been Here Before," has inspired Alexander Korda to write an original screen play for Merle Oberon. As the title suggests, the story deals with that inexplicable "I-have - seen-this - place," or "I - have-been-here-before" sensation that we sometimes have when we visit a strange place for the first time. The heroine, of course, is played by Merle and she helped Alex with the story. She carries that sensation throughout her life and finally it comes true with unexpected results.

PARSONS

Korda has indeed an ambitious program ahead. He has planned six pictures, as large a schedule as any independent producer in Hollywood. He starts "Lady Hamilton," with Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, in three weeks. Vivien and Laurence will be Mr. and Mrs. when they bring Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson to the screen.

Brian Aherne is the talk of the town since the preview of "The Lady in Question." He's really one of the very best character actors in Hollywood—but even his fans will be bowled over when they see him as the middle-class shopkeeper with a paunch and a mustache. Remember how wonderful he was, too, as Maxmillian in "Juarez," practically stealing the honors from Davis and Muni? Well, all this is leading up to the news that Brian's next picture will be "And So Goodbye," the James Hilton story at Columbia. Hear there's a chance that Rita Hayworth, his vis-a-vis in "The Lady in Question," may also be the lady in question in the Hilton story.

You never know your luck in Hollywood — which makes movietown the exciting place it is. One year ago John Shelton couldn't get a job for love or money. Then out of the blue M-G-M gave him the lead opposite Lana Turner in a "B" picture, "We Who Are Young," and presto—young Mr. Shelton's stock goes skyward. Saturday he was on the RKO lot, where he's wanted for one of two pictures, "No, No, Nanette," with Anna Neagle, or "Kitty Foyle," with Ginger Rogers. M-G-M hasn't said yes or no to the loanout—but all this bidding for his services isn't hurting his prestige on the home lot.

Slipped into the projection room and saw just a bit of "The Letter," Bette Davis' new picture, and Bette surprised me by playing almost the entire first reel with her back to the camera. Only an actress of her ability would dare do a thing like that, but it's mighty effective and different from the usual first sequence. I've never seen a picture start off with more of a bang. It opens where she kills her husband, and from then on there's plenty of excitement and drama. From what little I saw of the picture it looks like another winner for La Davis.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Helen Parrish and Charles Lang are a romantic item; Claudette Colbert has a badly sprained foot; Douglas Fairbanks, jr., leaves in a few weeks for Washington to consult with Secretary of State Hull about the placement of the 60 refugee children for whom he has agreed to assume responsibility; Simone Simon has started the fad of wearing mismatched earrings, a topaz in one ear and a sapphire in the other; Kay Griffith, who was John Howard's heart throb for so many months, is again the leading lady in his life.

Benny Rubin in Maurice, the jeweler's, buying a cute watch for his bride. He would have been happy, but just had two wisdom teeth extracted; Bing Crosby's new picture, "Rhythm on the River," will be previewed at his Del Mar race track August 16. That's an assignment all the movie critics wil want to fill; Arthur Treacher, one of our most recent bridegrooms, goes into the "Panama Hattie" show; John Carroll and June Duprez a Ciro twosome; that was Elizabeth Earle, Warner player, with Burgess Meredith at the Victor Hugo.

Kay Kyser's mother, from No'th Carolina, is here to visit her son.

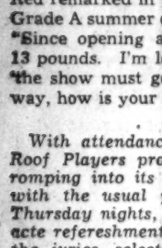
That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 12.

Well, zanies are back in "I Love You Again," with Myrna Low and Bill Powell. You'll laugh until you're blue in the face at Bill's portrayal of a one-time penny pincher who gets a terrific shock saving a life on an ocean-going steamer, and comes out of a nine-year case of amnesia—well, you can just carry on from there. Bill does a swell job, carries on with everyone from the small town mayor to the Boy Scouts. If it's fun you're looking for, you'll find it in this one.



HOPPER

The Army has the edge on Paramount. In order to get their picture, "I Wanted Wings," started by the 25th, studio has to have material enough to make 75 uniforms. But the Government's order for 11,000,000 yards seems to have clogged the works. If and when Director Ted Reed gets his company going, it will be a field day for Randolph Field in San Antonio, Tex., because they'll need 10,000 marching men in the review. And what a cast—Bill Holden, Ray Milland, Wayne Morris, Rita Hayworth, and they have one more girl to pick out of 72 applicants.

Wilfrid Lawson, who caught hades from the Nazis in "Pastor Hall," is giving them some of their own medicine. Wilfrid, as soon as he finished the "The Long Voyage Home," returned to England and joined the air force. He's just brought down his fifth Nazi plane on English soil . . . Dame Rumor hath it these will marry—Reventlow and Grant (Cash and Cary). Which reminds me that Babs has just given $100,000 to the British War Relief.

Billy Rose got lonely for his pal, Sid Grauman, and flew to the coast for a couple of days visit. Tells me the reason he keeps wife Eleanor Holm doing four shows a day at the Aquacade is to keep her out of mischief. A girl can't get into trouble in a goldfish bowl . . . Sam Goldwyn, believe it or not, has taken his son to June Lake for a week of fishing. Sam fished last year for the first time, and fell in love with—fish!

If you're thinking of visiting New York and want to live at the St. Regis during September, you'd better get your bid in now. The Duke of Windsor's already taken three floors . . . After Laraine Day's performance in "My Son, My Son," she was picked as one of the Hollywood actresses most likely to go places. But now I understand she's getting a little uppity and hard to handle. This is just a friendly tip to watch your step, Laraine, and give the same kind of cooperation you got from Metro when they started you in the business.

When Paramount advertised for twins to play Wayne Morris as a baby, they didn't bargain for what they got. For suddenly appearing on the "Touchdown" set were Charlotte and Shirley Cooper, girls of 16, who sang in unison, "We saw where you wanted twins—well, we are identical. Have a look!" Now the studio wanted babies—but not this kind.

Writer Dwight Taylor is a persistent kind of devil. Into the three Astaire-Rogers pictures he wrote, he put a sequence about some down-and-out musicians who had to pawn their instruments, and to get them back, held an audition in the pawnshop. The scene was cut out from all three. He wrote the same scene in two of Jessie Mathews' English pictures. It was cut out. He did exactly the same thing in Bing Crosby's "Rhythm on the River." It was left in, and it's one of the biggest laugh sequences in the whole picture.

Frances Langford was lunching with Jon Hall at an obscure Valley cafe when the proprietor came over and boasted of the many stars who ate there. "Oh, how exciting," exclaimed Hall. "Does Frances Langford ever eat here?" "Sure, she's one of my best customers. Come back tonight—she's having dinner with me."

Rome Reports Decisive Battle For Berbera

Italians in Contact With British Forty Miles South of Port

Rome, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—A decisive battle for the British Somaliland capital of Berbera was reported underway tonight about 40 miles south of the coastal town where Italian forces smashed against a hastily thrown-up desert defense line manned by thousands of British native troops.

Italian dispatches said contingents of Indian troops, moved through the Red Sea, had arrived on the Somaliland front where they were thrown into a semi-circular line of trenches and pillboxes designed to defend Berbera.

The Italian high command reported in its official communique today that the steadily advancing Fascist troops had "made contact" with heavy enemy concentrations outside Berbera.

Blackshirts Aid Regulars

Addis Ababa dispatches said Italian regulars, blackshirt militia, and native camel cavalry with motorized units, had fought their way through the mountains and reached the Lowlands only 40 miles from Berbera and the Gulf of Aden coast.

Italian aviation swept ahead of the drive in bombing attacks, while British planes from Aden and British warships from the Red Sea were reported to be bolstering the British land resistance.

The British, according to Italian dispatches, originally intended to make a stand on the mountain tops about 60 miles south of Berbera, but the Italian column which occupied the port of Zeila last week threatened to push southward along the coastal road and cut off the passes from behind. As result, it was claimed, the British were forced to form a semicircular defense line running from Bulhar on the coast to the plains at the foot of the inland mountain ranges and around to the coast again east of Berbera.

The Italians were reported here to be pushing toward the coast in two strong forces from the direction of the Ethiopian frontier, one pushing upon Berbera through Burao and the other striking through Hargeisa toward Bulhar on the coast 45 miles west of Berbera.

Temperature Is 129

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 12.—Italy moved more troops, planes and tanks near the Egyptian frontier tonight as Fascist forces driving across British Somaliland deserts halted within 60 miles of Berbera, British port on the Gulf of Aden.

British officers returning from the Egyptian-Libyan border reported heavy Italian troop movements continued near Bardia, about 30 miles from the frontier, but the forces of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani thus far have not moved eastward from that base.

Blistering heat waves swept desert temperatures to 129 degrees, and military sources believed Marshal Graziani was waiting for a break in the weather before launching an offensive against Egypt.

German Beer Malt Content Normal Again

Nazis Hail Order As Proof That Grain Supply Is Ample

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Today was a red-letter day on the calendar of German beer lovers. Their favorite drink, which for many months has been existing in a precariously weakened condition, returned to its former strength.

It is back again to 10 per cent malt content, instead of 6 per cent, on which it has subsisted since last fall.

This is proof, the Germans say, that the grain supply is sufficiently ample to permit a reduction of the barley content in bread and thus liberate quantities of this grain for brewing purposes.

'France Had Strength To Fight,' De Gaulle

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—France still had the strength and weapons to continue the war at the time she sued for peace, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, independent French leader, said today in a world-wide broadcast to the French people.

"Contrary to the statements of the old men of Vichy," de Gaulle declared, "France still possessed powerful means of fighting at the time our arms were given up.

"We still had intact a fleet that was the second in Europe, a large air force and a vast empire."

Nazis Report Capture Of 160,000 Horses

Berlin, Aug. 12 (AP).—Germany captured more than 160,000 horses during the campaigns in Poland and in western Europe, Dr. Peter Steinhardt, veterinary officer, said today.

More than 20,000 were captured in the battle of Kutno, Poland; over 40,000 around Dunkerque and over 100,000 in France, he said.

Train Runs Two Days Without Passengers

Istanbul, Aug. 12 (AP).—The famous Simplon-Orient express arrived here today without a passenger, indicating the severe travel restrictions now in effect. It was the first time in its history that the luxury train, starting from Italy, made the two-day run without a passenger.

U. S. Correspondent Ordered From France

Paris (Via Courier to Berlin), Aug. 8 (AP).—Sherry Morgan, Paris correspondent for the American magazines, Life, Time and Fortune, received a formal order today expelling him from German-occupied France. Morgan is the first American correspondent formally ordered out of German-occupied parts of France. Walter Kerr, Paris correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune, was advised to depart last July 4, but this was not a formal order.

Mine-Laying Nazi Pilot Tells of Hazardous, Thankless Job

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Germany's conflict with Britain has developed a special type of German aviator, the minelayer, says Hans Rechenberg, 29, right-hand man of Economics Minister Walther Funk in peacetime.

Rechenberg chose parachuting as a military career during the war but since parachutists are not active just now he is going along as a gunner aboard a Nazi minelaying plane.

"I take off my hat to those men who regularly risk their lives on the unspectacular and rather thankless job of nocturnal aerial minelaying," said Rechenberg, returning to Berlin after his fifth flight to England within a week.

"A bomber has the satisfaction of seeing an explosion under him and of having pursuit planes which accompany the bomber bear witness to his success," Rechenberg said. "The minelayer can only tell by his instruments whether the mine fell straight and whether he threw it off exactly where it was ordered.

"Afterward, he can only surmise that this or that ship of whose destruction he reads hit his particular mine.

"Yet these flights, as I know from personal experience, are even more dangerous than those of bombers.

"If a bomber gets caught in concentrated searchlights, or if enemy planes make things hot for him, he can nevertheless drop his bombs somewhere and do some damage, after which his plane is much lighter and faster.

"A mine thrower, in such circumstances, must lug his heavy mine home again and have the further disappointment that the flight is not counted to his credit for awards, decorations or promotions."

Minelaying by plane is far more effective than by ship, Rechenberg believes, because a plane can approach closer to an enemy shore and penetrate deeper into bays and estuaries than can a ship.

"The mere fact that the enemy knows we have been in a certain place greatly slows down navigation," he asserted, "for convoyed ships halt until minesweepers go over the area.

"It is even worse for the enemy if he knows in a general way that we have been over for a visit. Uncertainty as to where new mines may lie acts decidedly as a brake on the flow of goods in convoyed ships."

Scientific navigation is one of the prime essentials for mine-laying success, he said.

Among the troubles of a mine-laying plane, he added, is the balloon barrage.

"I've pecked at many balloons during my flights, for those pesky things finish you if you happen to run into them.

"We keep the sharpest lookout for them and shoot them down the moment they are sighted.

Foot Soldier in Poland

Rechenberg, who was a newspaper man before he became an official in the economics ministry, asserted he volunteered as a parachutist chiefly because he hoped to be able to report on parachute activities once his unit was sent against Britain.

An infantryman in the Polish campaign and commander of a Siegfried Line bunker during the winter, he asked last spring to be transferred to the parachutists school.

He said that only a trained parachutist could describe parachute activity intelligently, yet there has been no trained journalist in this category of German fighters heretofore.

Tolerances Relaxed On Fruit Shipments

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt yesterday announced a relaxation of the tolerances for lead and arsenic on apples and pears shipped within the jurisdiction of the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. The new tolerances are 0.05 grain of lead per pound and 0.025 grain of arsenic per pound.

The new tolerances revise the order of September 19, 1938, and are based on the results of a three-year study made by the United States Public Health Service at the direction of Congress.

Italy Expected to Protest Albanian's Slaying to Greece

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Aug. 12.—The Italian government will lodge a protest with the Greek government for the alleged murder of Daut Hoggia, Albanian Nationalist, "exposed" yesterday in a Stefani news agency dispatch from Tirana, responsible Italian circles said today.

News of the incident, they added, has caused great irritation in Italy because "whoever strikes at Albania strikes at Italy." As a consequence, the murder will have "repercussions," although Italian circles abstain from specifying their nature.

"The incident in Greece," Italian circles said, "is a very unfortunate one. The ferocity with which the murder was committed arouses a wave of indignation in Italy and Albania."

The press gives prominence to the Stefani agency dispatch and headlines emphasize that the murder is a "cruel episode of Greek despotism," and that "Greece is against the Albanians."

Territorial Aim Seen

Despite what the newspaper Osservatore Romano calls the "grave and severe terms" with which the murder is being deplored by the Italian press, it does not seem that Italy intends to make a casus belli of the incident. Italian circles said that they had "no news of the adoption of Italian military measures in Albania," and that "the Greek-Albanian border was open."

The general opinion in diplomatic circles is that Italy has seized on the murder of an Albanian to advance territorial claims on Greek territory. However, it is thought, she need not push this claim by force of arms, since she is certain of the ultimate defeat of England—which the Italians do not doubt for a moment—the claim will be satisfied at the peace conference dominated by the victorious powers.

Italy, it was believed, has no intention of creating a new battle front in Greece unless the Greek attitude becomes "provocative" to such an extent as to preclude a solution of this particular incident by peaceful means.

Italian circles indirectly praised Greece's policy of neutrality today when she denied reports in the Italian press that British ships were using Greek harbors for refueling.

Greece Will Reply

"We know," they said, "that the British are not in Greece. Of course, should they attempt to use that country as a base we should not tolerate it and it would find us ready to face them there."

Since the incident has been reported only in a press dispatch so far, and no official statement has been made by the Italian government, the Greek legation will take no steps, it was learned. The charges contained in the Stefani dispatch will be replied to by the Greek government through the official Greek news agency.

As far as can be learned here, Athens will contend that Hoggia was murdered about three weeks ago by Albanians—and not Greeks—who subsequently fled to Greece, where they were arrested.

It will also claim that the Italian minister in Athens was notified of their arrest and that as a consequence extradition proceedings were to begin with a view to delivering the murderers to the Italian government when the Stefani dispatch was released.

Albanian Revolt Reported

New York, Aug 12 (AP).—At least 400 Italian soldiers have been killed in an Albanian uprising which has been inprogress since Friday, the British wireless reported n a broadcast heard tonight by N. B. C.

The report followed an Italian broadcast denying previous British news agency reports of disorders.

The British announcement said that nearly 8,000 Albanians were under arms. It was said three Italian warships took troops to the Albanian port of Durazzo yesterday. The Albanians are distributing leaflets urging all thei men of military age to flee to the mountains to avoid conscription by the Italian army, the British reported.

Out of Step

Almost every educated person in the country is aware of grave deficiencies in our high schools. Perhaps no group has been more successful in pointing out those shortcomings, however, than the committee of 10 educators which has just handed its report to the American Youth Commission.

Of course, the American high school serves many useful purposes. But it fails miserably in preparing youths to meet the problems that will confront them as soon as they complete or prematurely drop their scholastic training. No group has yet succeeded in coordinating the instruction offered in these secondary schools with the needs of the young people themselves or with the national welfare.

Our high schools not only try to equip a vast majority of their pupils for white collar jobs; they also cultivate the assumption such jobs are a sort of natural inheritance of those who complete high school courses. Yet "any examination of the opportunities that are really open," as the authors of the current report point out, "makes it clear that the hopes fostered by the present educational system are sure to be disappointed for most of those now registered in secondary schools."

If this report leads to a general shake-up in the curricula and the general objectives of the high school, it will render an invaluable service. In some other fields the American people are beginning to learn that peace and prosperity are not an inevitable result of technological progress and popular education. We are beginning to understand more clearly than we have done for a generation the necessity of work and sacrifice along with specialized knowledge and a certain degree of culture.

School programs that ignore these realities are in need of sharp readjustments. It is encouraging to note that leaders in the field of education are working out timely and practical suggestions to that end.

Menaced Greece

According to reports from London, obviously not unprejudiced, Albania is seething with discontent and may, before long, flare into open rebellion.

If this is true, it helps to explain the sharp tone which the Italian press has suddenly adopted toward Greece. That attitude cannot be explained simply on the ground of Italian irritation with alleged Grecian complicity in the slaying of an obscure Albanian leader.

It is extremely doubtful whether Italy's position in Albania is in any degree seriously threatened, however much the Albanians may chafe at the Fascist yoke. A far more likely reason for the violent barrage of Fascist propaganda against the Greek kingdom is to be found in the general situation.

There appears to be little doubt that the British fleet is still supreme in the eastern Mediterranean. This means that Italian transports and shipments of food and munitions to the Italian garrisons in Libya are at the mercy of British seapower. And as long as that remains true Mussolini's ambitions to capture the Suez Canal will encounter formidable difficulties.

Were Italy in control of Greece, or if she could obtain use of that country's extended coastline for naval operations against the British fleet, Mussolini's African campaign would have a much greater chance of speedy success than it has now.

It is hardly surprising, therefore, that the Fascist press has suddenly discovered Greece to be a "blind despotism" pursuing a "policy of intolerable persecution" against the Albanians. Greece is also accused of conspiring with Great Britain to foment "plots" on the Greco-Albanian border. But Mussolini's journalistic mouthpieces let the real cat out of the bag in further accusing the Greek government of supplying oil to British warships and planes.

What Italy appears to be after is a wholly compliant Greece whose neutrality will be weighted on the side of the Axis, a Greece prepared to allow her territory to be used to destroy British sea power. The Italian propagandist campaign against Greece is, in other words, the inevitable accompaniment of the Italian military and air campaign against the British.

The Modern Army

Debate on the compulsory training features of the Burke-Wadsworth bill has obscured some other important questions concerning the enlarged military force the United States has begun to build. That bill would permit the drafting of men to meet a temporary emergency. Congress also faces the problem of revitalizing the Army as a permanent protective force.

In the hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, said that one problem is "the immediate situation of the next six months" and the other is "what we should do over a period of years." Short-term plans must take precedence over long-range objectives in a time like the present. Yet even emergency measures should bear a proper relationship to the general policy of building an efficient modern Army.

It should not be supposed that compulsory training of young men for a year will automatically bring such an army into being. If our Army is to be equal to the mechanized military forces it may sometime have to meet, it must have men of special training, skill and experience. The need for specialists was clearly brought out by Gen. Marshall in the following illustration:

> The effectiveness of the $400,000 plane depends upon the advantages gained by successful bombing and the lives of everybody in the plane are involved in that operation, and yet one man, an enlisted man, is primarily concerned in carrying out that procedure. We must have a great degree of skill there. We must be able to hold men so trained.

Congress ought to face the question of whether men can be properly trained for such tasks in one year. The Burke-Wadsworth bill has already been amended to change the training period from 8 months to 12. The War Department believes that an 18-month period would be far more satisfactory.

The ultimate effect of the Burke-Wadsworth bill would be to build up a large reserve of men having had one year of training. The usefulness of such a reserve in protecting the security of the United States cannot be doubted. On the other hand, it would be a mistake to assume that such a reserve would constitute a first-class modern army.

Certainly the existence of such a reserve would not justify any relinquishment of emphasis upon the professional nucleus of the Army. A large number of career soldiers would be needed to train the conscripted recruits as well as to stand by for emergency service. Thus it becomes important to see that the supply of men for long enlistment periods is not cut off while temporary trainees are being brought in.

As it stands, the conscription bill would permit one-year enlistments. That seems desirable as a means of securing as many men as possible through voluntary means. Yet it may have the effect of discouraging three-year enlistments and of thus reducing the number of men available for thorough training. The Army is already handicapped in obtaining career soldiers by discriminatory ratings which prevent reasonable advancement in rank and pay.

Consideration of these intricate problems will not draw as many headlines as will heated debate on compulsory versus voluntary training. But that does not minimize their importance. The responsibility of Congress will not be fully discharged until it has examined every aspect of this bill and shaped it into an effective instrument of national defense.

Pants Of Destruction

Careful students of history will have a certain sympathy with Signor Mussolini's repugnance to the fashion which sends so many women strolling about the world nowadays in long pants and big sun glasses.

When a woman is persuaded to put on pants, argues Il Duce's newspaper, she forfeits her femininity. So keen an admirer of the ancient Romans as Mussolini must know that writers of the late Imperial period were fond of ascribing the decadence of the times to the influence of pants, though on precisely opposite grounds. That is to say the Romans considered trousers—an innovation from the Oriental provinces—to be the last word in effeminacy. When that august screwball, the Emperor Heliogabalus, permitted himself to be seen in them it was too big a scandal for even that dissolute age to endure.

Thus Signor Mussolini's position might have been somewhat sounder if he had come out flatly against the wearing of pants by either sex. It certainly could be shown that none of the really "young, virile peoples" of Europe, such as the Homeric Greeks, or the Milesian Celts, or the Merovingian Franks, was addicted to the wearing of pants. And if we can believe Oswald Spengler, whose philosophy of history so delights the Nazi and Fascist mentality, the vital juices of our "Faustian" (i. e., Western) civilization petered out at about the time of the French Revolution. Is it not significant that men adopted pants as standard attire about that time?

And archeology offers an even more disturbing thought. There has been only one other great civilization whose period of decadence was marked by wearing of long pants by both sexes simultaneously. This was the Cretian or Mycenaean civilization which disappeared more completely than that of Babylon, Egypt, Carthage, Greece or Rome.

Indeed the only thing we seem to know about it is that just before it went under everybody—priestesses, politicians, pot boys, princesses, poets, generals, bartenders, ballerinas, patricians, proletarians and bourgeoisie—were going around in fancy bell-bottomed slacks which ominously resembled our new fangled beach pajamas.

Argentina Acts

Like the other South American republics, Argentina has been faced by a Fifth Column menace of potentially serious dimensions. Until recently, however, little was done by the Buenos Aires government to meet the danger head-on.

One explanation for this apparent complacence may be found in the circumstance that the great masses of the Argentinian population proved immune to the blandishments of Berlin and Rome. The propagandists for Hitler and Mussolini have made some converts in certain small sections of the army, the business community and the professions. But the majority of the people remains overwhelmingly hostile to Nazi-Fascist ideology.

Indeed, no Latin-American nation has a more vigorous anti-Fifth Column movement than Argentina. The "Accion Argentina," popularly known as the "Sixth Column," has enlisted some of the most important citizens of the nation, including Dr. Marcelo Alvear, former president of the republic and leader of the largest political group in that country.

Despite this resistance, the danger to Argentina's internal safety and stability from Fifth Column elements continues to exist. Proof of this is to be found in the discovery by the Argentine police of large caches of arms in the territory of Missiones and of subversive activities by Nazi organizations in other parts of the nation. Together with the revelations made by a Uruguayan congressional committee regarding Nazi plans for an armed revolt in certain parts of South America, these disclosures have opened the eyes of the Buenos Aires authorities to the dangers of the situation.

Argentina is now meeting the challenge with firmness and courage. On Sunday the Argentine police arrested Arnulf Fuhrmann, confessed author of the Nazi military plan for the seizure of Uruguay and one of the principal leaders of the Nazi Fifth Column in South America. In the meantime, the newspapers of Buenos Aires are vigorously demanding that the government terminate the activities of Nazi organizations in the republic. Such action may now follow.

Blitzed By Bunnies

Il Duce's latest scheme is an old one to American boys. Italians now will have the opportunity long afforded the youthful members of our own population, to get rich quick growing rabbits. And to expedite results, the Premier has granted a subsidy.

Before embarking on this venture to build up his diminishing meat supply, Signor Mussolini might well have taken a few tips from those who have raised rabbits for fun and profit. The Lepus is a mild-looking creature, diffident by reputation. But if he ever gets loose, look out! No animal is less suited to life under the Fascist regime. He refuses to be regimented, and the only salute he knows is a kick in the eye.

He multiplies rapidly, it is true—so rapidly that a new housing development is a weekly necessity. He eats everything that is offered, including portions of the hand that feeds him. He escapes and devours the garden, scratches your face when recaptured, and finally when you have about decided it is time to eat him, he gets sick and dies.

The only experiment with rabbit cultivation comparable in size to the Italian was launched in Australia. The deceptive creatures were introduced with the idea that in some way the continent would reap large benefits.

The project was a huge success—so far as the rabbits were concerned. Over fence and farm they swept, carrying all before them. Reputedly they learned to climb trees and scale six-foot barriers. Il Duce should take care when he advocates the admission of such dangerous aliens. In a year he may be routed from the Palazzo Venezia by a blitzkrieg of Belgian hares.

If the pen be mightier than the sword, it's time to enlist an army of writers.

We Americans established this Nation primarily in order to avoid excessive taxation, and now look at us!

An Eastern asylum for the insane reports that not one of its many inmates is a golfer. It's next to impossible to tell when a golfer is crazy.

"Cheese may be used in sandwiches," declares the helpful Bureau of Home Economics of the United State Department of Agriculture. It may, indeed—in fact, it's ever so much more likely than that.

First Lady's Column

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a regular reader of the opposite editorial page of The Washington Post, I resent as unwarranted Westbrook Pegler's attack upon Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Mr. Pegler's reputation has been acquired as a perpetual nagger and persistent fault finder. There is a reading public for this type of journalism, since it is a human failing to enjoy somebody else's discomfiture. Mrs. Roosevelt's policy has been the helping hand, kindly encouragement and constant interest in the underprivileged. Her travel, contacts and human experience have added to the timeliness of her writing, and certainly to its vitality and color. As I have observed her typewriter output, it is not within her great heart to consciously hurt any living being. While I have no national poll of readers as a guiding chart, I venture the opinion of a veteran newspaperman that Mrs. Roosevelt's reading public is twice that of Westbrook Pegler.

Mr. Pegler must know that as a daily columnist Mrs. Roosevelt has a perfect right to call herself a working journalist and is fully eligible for full membership in most press associations as an active writer member.

Of course her connection with the White House adds value and prestige to what she says. I know of no law which compels the wife of a President to lose her identity or to be mute in thought and opinion because destiny has placed her in the spotlight.

Mr. Pegler knows that Mrs. Roosevelt is not working for the Communist cause. If he wants to conduct a personal purge of the labor movement, that is his privilege; but I resent and condemn his charge that "she doesn't belong," and I am content to rest my case with the working newspaperwomen of Washington, who know. They say that "she does belong" and that whatever she says and does will be of national interest long after she leaves the White House.

From A Girl

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a girl whose boy friend and brothers all are between the ages of 21 and 31, I am tremendously interested in the Burke-Wadsworth bill. As this same girl, I want to express the sentiment of all my friends among whom this bill has been discussed pro and con.

We feel very disturbed that in a country nominally at peace, it is thought necessary to consider such a proposal. My brothers and boy friends are all starting work or have been working only a few years, and they are now beginning to think of establishing homes of their own. Some of them are even married and are struggling to make a worthwhile life. Not all of them feel that they can stop their work at its present stage and join the Army for a year at $21 a month and lose everything they have gained with so much struggle. Some who do want to join the Army cannot afford to, and at the same time feel that they do not want to join if forced to do so.

We have, therefore, come to the conclusion that we do not want to have the Burke-Wadsworth bill passed by Congress, and we feel that if the Army were made attractive enough—with more money paid to the soldiers and with more democracy in the ranks, it would not be necessary for such a bill to be passed. The solution to building up the United States Army lies not in the conscription, but in making the Army something we would like to have our friends belong to.

"Unguarded Language"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to congratulate you upon your editorial in the issue of August 8 entitled "Brawl in the Senate." It is unfortunate but true that groups are judged not by the best elements in them but all too often by the least representative of the groups. We like to think of the United States Senate as a legislative body of highest dignity, but a blush of shame envelops us when we read of such unguarded language as was used by Senators Holt and Minton a few days ago.

Analyzing The Poll

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The first post-convention Gallup Poll on the Presidential race is intensely interesting with Roosevelt leading in the popular total and Willkie ahead in electoral votes.

Strangely enough the first poll after the party conventions four years ago showed Landon leading in electoral votes. Dr. Gallup mentions this fact in his comment, as he mentions many other salient facts to help appraise the situation. Of course he could not go into all the important considerations. Here, I think, are several he omitted:

While Willkie has a percentage as high as 65 in only one State, Maine, with 8 electoral votes, Roosevelt has 65 per cent, or much higher, in 12 States with 127 electoral votes.

While the Roosevelt column holds one State in the lowest favorable percentage of 51 to 49 (Missouri with 15 votes), the Willkie column holds six States in the lowest favorable percentage with 40 electoral votes. A shift of these 40 votes would give Roosevelt an electoral majority.

In addition to these the Willkie column now has in the "52-48" percentage four States with 106 electoral votes. Landon having led in the first poll of 1936 as Willkie leads today it is reasonable enough to look for a settling down in these very close States. The shift would give Roosevelt 373 to Willkie's 158.

Bolters

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the latest news from Mr. Willkie that he is looking for Democratic votes. Well, he will need lots of them, as he is following the course of Hoover and Landon, which does not mean anything.

We notice that the Old Deal gang is following Willkie like a lot of hitch-hikers thumbing a ride—all those faces of the Old Dealers who fell off the bandwagon when it rounded the corner to recovery. Just look them over—Alfalfa Bill Murray, James Reed, Al Smith, Jouett Shouse and a lot of others.

We freely concede the right of these forgetten men to bolt the Democratic Party, but they cannot bolt it every four years. All of these men bolted the party in 1936 and everyone thought they had stayed out. Al Smith and Jouett Shouse and other Liberty Leaguers did not wait until the 1936 Democratic convention to take a walk. These men have fought Roosevelt for eight years and have been out of the party for four years, yet the anti-New Deal papers put them in as Democrats bolting their party. Of course, that is nothing. How can anyone who is not a Democrat bolt the Democratic Party?

Equal Sacrifice

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one of the single men between the ages of 21 and 31 who would be subject to the draft if the compulsory training bill passes it has been a matter of some wonder to me that the committees of Congress considering the bill haven't called in any of the proposed draftees to get their views on the matter. It occurs to me that probably they will be more affected than anyone else.

My complaint about the bill, and it is a very general one, is that it requires an enormous sacrifice on the part of a certain portion of population without calling for an equal sacrifice on the part of others. And this in a Nation built on a principle of equality of opportunities and a supposed equality of obligations.

The bill as it stands would require the Nation's single young men to throw up their jobs and in many cases their opportunity for future success. In a period of unemployment such as the present those jobs will be snapped up immediately and no law Congress can pass can provide for the restoration of those jobs at the end of the period of required training. The pious words in the present bill mean nothing more than that Congress hopes the former employers of these men will give them their jobs back.

Certainly men are necessary for the armed forces. But the Nation also needs money to pay for national defense. It seems only fair that if some of us are to be required to completely disorganize our lives to defend the rest of the country, the rest of the country should make an approximately equal sacrifice. Therefore, I suggest that, since voluntary collections won't work, income taxes be so increased that those persons not engaged in active defense work be placed on an income level slightly above subsistence requirements. An income tax of this proportion would come near to paying for the cost of defense.

This system would be a satisfactory solution for those over-the-draft-age statesmen who are crying out that the times require great sacrifice, by enabling them to make something of a sacrifice themselves.

Mr. Thomas' Position

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ernest K. Lindley greatly underestimates the intelligence of his readers when he accuses Norman Thomas, the eminent Socialist, of advocating a "plutocratic doctrine," betraying Socialist principles because of his condemnation of conscription.

In his column of August 5, Lindley charged the Socialist candidate for President with being in opposition to the principles of Socialism when, at a peace meeting here, he condemned conscription and announced preference for an army of professionals. Lindley inferred that a conscript army is a "citizens' army." That is utter rot.

The dictionary says that a conscript is a compulsorily enlisted soldier. It, therefore, doesn't make sense to say that conscription creates a citizens' army. It is rather an army of forced servitude, in spite of Mr. Lindley; on the other hand, a citizens' army would be an army of voluntarily enlisted free men, who serve willingly without force or compulsion.

A conscripted army is essentially an army of amateurs, in contrast to a well-trained, decently paid army of professionals. Mr. Thomas favors a highly mechanized, small army for defense only, based on the volunteer system. Mr. Thomas believes that drafting an army in peacetime is undemocratic. Conscription is, in fact, itself a plutocratic doctrine.

Mr. Littletree Sees It Through

MR. LITTLETREE closed the door softly. He adjusted his spectacles, and once again peered into his billfold. It was not there. He could feel a tug of uneasiness at his heart as he slipped the wallet into his side coat pocket.

"Well," he sighed, trying to shake off the feeling of fright that had begun to oppress him. "Well, it's silly—quite silly—to worry about it."

But the fact was still the fact—he had lost his laundry ticket, and into his mind popped the phrase, age-old and unalterable, "No tickee, no washee."

"He will return them," he told himself. "After all, they do belong to me; and besides, what would a laundryman do with three dress shirts?"

He removed his coat and put on his robe. Then he entered his study. To be sure, the problem was serious, and required all the thought he could give it. Automatically, Mr. Littletree walked over to the rows upon rows of books lining his study walls. Instinctively, he reached for the green-cloth copy of "Be Glad You Have an Inferiority Complex." He searched through the index for "Laundry," "Tickets" and "Lost," but unfortunately for Mr. Littletree, these subject headings were missing. He turned the pages of the book at random, but he could find nothing to help him solve his problem, until his eye chanced upon the following paragraph:

"Very frequently a difficult problem may be converted into an exercise of ingenuity. Ask yourself the question: What are four possible methods of solving this problem? Write down each answer on a slip of paper, leaving enough room at the bottom for additional notes. Then sit back, and consider the possibility of success with each method. Try to eliminate all but one slip. When you have decided which way seems most likely to bring success, the time has come to capitalize on your ingenuity. Follow through! You will solve your problem, and the reward to you in growth of self-confidence will be incalculable."

Mr. Littletree returned the book and went to his desk. From the top drawer, he removed a pad and pencil, and then he began to consider the problem.

"I have lost my laundry ticket," he said. "In what four ways can I possibly get back my shirts?"

Before very long Mr. Littletree was holding four slips of paper in his hand, containing one of the following items:

A. CONGRESSMAN, assuming the identity of
B. BELLIGERENCE, pretense of
C. SYMPATHY, appeal to
D. COMMON GROUND OF INTEREST, establishment of

He considered each one carefully. Suppose he were to say to Charlie Sing, "I'm Congressman Littletree. I've lost my laundry ticket, and I have to attend a recital at the White House tonight. Let me have my shirts, please."

After a moment, Mr. Littletree shook his head. No, that wouldn't do. Would Charlie Sing be impressed enough to return the shirts? Mr. Littletree doubted it.

His mind refused to dwell on the second item. It would be very difficult for him to adopt a "tough" attitude. One heard that Orientals possessed knives.

SYMPATHY struck him more favorably. That might work. Yes, indeed, it might. Mr. Littletree allowed a mild elation to possess him. But in a moment this feeling had disappeared. Wasn't this method one which the book had forbidden in Chapter One? Wasn't this likely to lead to an intensification of inferiority, because one had become the object of sympathy?

That would never do, Mr. Littletree decided.

COMMON GROUND OF INTEREST was next.

How would that work? Mr. Littletree asked himself. Then some ideas came to him. He could begin a conversation and express interest in China's struggle with Japan. Surely that would please Charlie so that he would not mind the loss of the ticket.

"That is it," Mr. Littletree said, as he slipped out of his robe.

In a few moments he was in the street, walking toward the laundry. He entered the small store without hesitation, and walked over to the counter. A young man, dressed in a white shirt, black trousers and carpet slippers sat on a stool on the other side of the counter, eating rice with chopsticks. Mr. Littletree's heart sank. "Is Charlie in?" he asked timidly. The young man said something in Chinese, and Charlie came out from the rear.

"Hello, Charlie," said Mr. Littletree, and then he quickly pointed to a picture on the wall. "That—Chiang Kai-shek—no?"

"Yes, Chiang Kai Shek."

"Good fighter—good general!"

The Chinaman laughed.

"Yes, Chiang Kai Shek. Chiang Kai-shek!" He became speechless. "Chiang Kai-shek," he concluded, visibly affected.

Mr. Littletree was elated. Here was his opportunity!

"Charlie," he said, "me lost laundly tickee. You give me shirts, no?"

Charlie looked blank.

"No tickee?"

"No, Caarlie, no tickee. Lost tickee."

Charlie went over to the shelf and withdrew a package.

"You got fawly-five cents?" he asked.

"Yes," said Mr. Littletree, shivering in anticipation. He placed a bill on the counter, and Charlie gave him the change. Mr. Littletree picked up his bundle and walked toward the door.

At that moment the young man, sitting behind the counter, addressed him.

"May I suggest, sir, that if you should lose your ticket again, you might save yourself considerable anguish by expressing yourself more intelligibly."

For a moment Mr. Littletree stared. The sense of joy had left him, and his fingers trembled as he opened the door.

Today And Tomorrow

The Case Of The Opponents Of The Conscription Bill

THERE MUST be many who think, as Mr. Mark Sullivan said the other day, that in the debates over the conscription bill there is at issue "a deep question of principle." They are, I submit, mistaken. There would be an issue of principle if, in fact, the Congressional critics of the Burke-Wadsworth bill were opposed to the principle of conscription. But they are not. The three Senators who brought in the minority report are not opposed to the principle of conscription. The former Secretary of War, Mr. Woodring, who is cited as their chief authority, is not opposed to the principle of conscription.

Though they say they are opposed to "peace-time" conscription and denounce it "as abhorrent to the ideals of patriotic Americans" and as "utterly repugnant to American democracy and American traditions," the fact of the matter is that the minority, including Mr. Woodring, are not opposed in principle even to "peace-time" conscription. For Mr. Woodring has declared that "if the voluntary system fails" to provide enough men, then he will support peace-time conscription, and the minority members of the Senate committee announce that they "will gladly support conscription" in peace-time if voluntary enlistment should fail to recruit enough men.

CAN IT REALLY be said then that there is a deep question of principle at stake when the opposition in Congress (a) accepts the principle of conscription in time of war and (b) accepts the principle of conscription in time of peace if enough volunteers do not come forward? If conscription as such is wrong in principle it is wrong in time of war. If not conscription as such but "peace-time conscription" is "repugnant" and "abhorrent," then it is no less repugnant and abhorrent to conscript men if not enough men volunteer. For when you are telling young men that if you propose to conscript them if they do not volunteer, why pretend that you are preserving their freedom of choice? Can it be said with any sincerity, or even with a straight face, that you are adhering to the voluntary system when you tell young men that they will surely be drafted in time of war, and that if they do not volunteer quickly, they will surely be drafted, anyway?

There is no substantial difference of principle between the supporters and the critics of the Burke-Wadsworth bill. The supporters invite men to volunteer and establish conscription to supplement volunteering. The critics invite men to volunteer and then brandish the threat of conscription to promote volunteering and make a promise of conscription to supplement volunteering. Thus both sides use the principle of compulsion: the advocates of the bill applying compulsion directly, the critics of the bill applying it indirectly by using the threat of compulsion. Both sides have abandoned the voluntary principle, and the only dispute is whether to exert compulsion directly or indirectly, to exert it now or later. This may be an interesting dispute. But it involves no deep question of principle.

THE REALLY conscientious opponents of conscription, those who reject it as morally wrong, are grossly deceived if they think that the minority of the Senate committee or ex-Secretary Woodring are championing their cause. They should read the minority report. They will find that the minority "does approve" the "registration and its exemptions" of men between 21 and 31 years of age; that, in other words, the minority approves the setting up at once of the whole machinery of conscription. Having set up the machinery of conscription, having registered and classified the men who are liable to be conscripted, the minority then proposes to wait until "Congress shall have declared that a state of war exists" before men are actually compelled to join the Army. The Burke-Wadsworth bill, on the other hand, provides that when men have been registered and classified, they may be compelled to join the Army only when "Congress shall hereafter appropriate funds specifically for such purpose."

Thus under the minority proposal no one may be conscripted unless Congress declares war; under the majority proposal no one may be conscripted, even after the enactment of the bill, except as Congress specifically votes money to conscript a definite number of men. In both cases the authority to conscript is still reserved to the Congress, under the majority plan because an appropriation is required and under the minority plan because a declaration of war is required. It is false, therefore, to assert that Congress delegates any kind of dictatorial powers to the Executive under either plan; the control of conscription under both plans remains firmly in Congress. But under both plans the right to conscript is established in principle, the machinery of conscription is established in fact, and the enforcement of conscription is made to depend not on any question of principle but solely on whether it is feasible to recruit enough men quickly enough by voluntary enlistment.

The debate turns, therefore, upon the validity of the arguments advanced by those who think that volunteering will provide a sufficient and properly qualified Army. They say it can be made to do that, and relying upon the testimony of Mr. Woodring's letter to Senator Vandenberg, they are offering an amendment to the Burke-Wadsworth bill which, says Mr. Woodring, ought to call forth "a million or two million young men for trained service in the United States Army." Their proposal, which they say will make voluntary enlistment boom, is to raise the minimum monthly base pay of the Army from $21 a month to $30 a month. They think that the young men will rush to the colors if they are offered 30 cents more a day and they think that for lack of this extra 30 cents the young men will not rush to the colors.

Mr. Woodring's estimate of the young men of America is not, as a matter of fact, borne out by the facts.

Mr. Woodring argued in his letter that whereas in the Navy a young man receives at least $30 a month within 60 or 90 days of enlistment, in the Army 95 per cent of the men never receive more than $21 a month for their three-year enlistment. He thinks that if, therefore, Army pay were raised to that of the Navy, there would be plenty of voluntary enlistment.

But as Mr. T. H. Thomas has pointed out, unfortunately for Mr. Woodring's argument, the higher pay of the Navy has produced at the end of June 146,500 enlisted men, whereas the lower pay of the Army had produced 256,000 enlisted men. The Navy, which already pays the rates which Mr. Woodring thinks would produce one or two million volunteers for the Army, does not expect to achieve more than 85 per cent of its desired strength until next January. With all the monetary inducements he proposed for the Army already in effect in the Navy, the Navy, which needs men of high quality but relatively few of them, is very slowly recruiting its small personnel.

There is, therefore, something radically wrong with Mr. Woodring's argument. What is wrong with it is the basic premise, that the willingness or unwillingness of American men to enlist is determined by the payment or non-payment of a few more dollars a month. That premise is wholly false: if the voluntary system can be made to work, it will not be by offering American men thirty cents more a day.

HOW CAN IT be made to work? The minority know quite well what would be required to make volunteering produce a million men quickly. But they are not frank about it. It would require, as they themselves have indicated, the threat of conscription if volunteering fails and along with that threat, all kinds of moral compulsion and a fierce propaganda.

As an indication of what kind of compulsion would be exerted upon the young men to make them volunteer, there is Mr. Mark Sullivan's suggestion, or was it only an inquiry, that the unemployed should be forced to enlist, that the able-bodied males in the C. C. C. and the N. Y. A. and the W. P. A. be "offered" a job in the Army, or else. That kind of compulsion seems to me, if I may say so, really odious in principle. But under the "voluntary" system, it would certainly be resorted to. And with it there would go an ingratiating campaign to pin white feathers on young men who did not volunteer, and the young ladies would be incited to call them slackers, and before the thing collapsed in ignominy and failure every young man would feel himself persecuted by the community. The voluntary system sounds well. In practice it is a moral horror. For under this system every young man who is not in uniform will be suspect wherever he goes since no one can tell by looking at a young man whether he is doing essential war work, or is married and has children, or is perhaps not in good health.

The voluntary system is not voluntary. It is in practice the worst form of compulsion since the compulsion is not the legal and open and orderly action of the State but the indirect, undiscerning cruelty of private busybodies and self-appointed persecuting patrioteers.

It is a system badly designed to raise an army but excellently designed to make young men unhappy.

Supporting Enemies

IF I WERE a big employer engaged in interstate commerce I would have been slapped into the boob a long time ago because I would have made it my business to fire all Communists, to sound off my views in shop orations and pamphlets and to refuse even to discuss, much less to consent to, a closed shop agreement in my plant.

If my own Government finds that it can't abide Communists on the WPA the same Government certainly looks funny telling me that I have no right to toss them out of my business, but I would have made the issue a long time before the Government came to this decision, and for that, of course, I would have been convicted of coercion and intimidation in the first degree and ordered to reinstate the Communists or support them in idleness on full wages for the rest of their lives. Nevertheless, I would have canned them, for the same reason that the Government has now decided to fire them out of WPA, to wit, that they are a lot of treacherous conspirators, and not only useless as workers but a menace to any business which employs them.

A MAN shouldn't be compelled to support his enemies, even when they have declared their hostility and demonstrated it by destructive actions. However, employers have been compelled to keep Communists on their pay rolls because of the very fact that they were Communists, the idea being that dismissal for their political beliefs would constitute an invasion of their rights.

But I would have given the Labor Board a pretty good argument. I would have pointed out that communistic enterprises, mainly publications, rigidly exclude non-Communists from their employ and fire those who falter in their faith, and I would have said, "Boys, is my Government asking an American businessman to conform to conditions which it is unwilling to impose on the Communist Party?"

I would have bothered them silly, but they would have convicted me just the same, and I suppose that even today, after the Government itself has decided to fumigate the WPA, the board still insists that private enterprise has no right to do the same.

IN THE MATTER of sounding off to the help I would have taken the position that my views are patriotic, constructive and generally helpful, and would have stood on the proposition that a businessman has as much right as anyone else to express his opinions.

I would have cited some of the lies circulated in the shop against the company and would have said:

"It is my duty to give the employes the benefit of correct information so that they be not misguided in reaching their decisions."

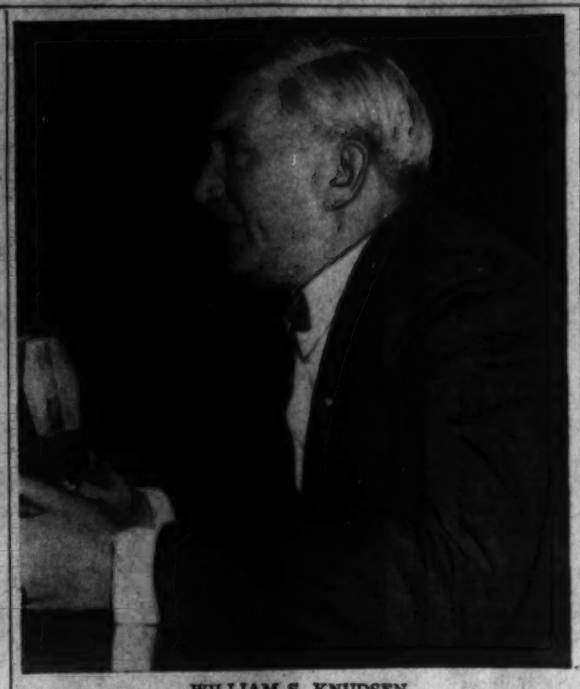
But I know that truth telling would have been construed as coercion and intimidation, too, and I would have received another sentence for that, probably to run consecutively.

And then in my dealings with the bargaining agent I would have said, "There will be no closed shop here, because I have no right to force nonunion people into your union," and you know what that would have led to. I would have been tried for refusing to bargain in good faith and convicted on another count, not for coercion and intimidation this time, however, but, on the contrary, for refusing to coerce and intimidate.

BECAUSE, while it is unlawful to coerce and intimidate union people even to the extent of giving raises selectively or saying "Nice day," it is not merely lawful but an obligation of good citizenship in an employer in certain conditions to coerce and intimidate nonunion people.

It seems silly that a law honestly intended to correct certain abuses should become the weapon for so many others, but there we are and nobody denies these new abuses, but still nobody does anything about reforming the law itself.

And here I am, an employer, filed away for goodness knows how long just because I anticipated and adopted my own Government's attitude toward Communists, stood on my rights to speak and write the truth as I saw it and refused to use my money power to compel the help to join an organization against their will.



WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN
His statement to a Senate committee that "it will be 1942 before there would be complete equipment for 750,000 men" raises the question whether an army of that size could be built up by voluntary enlistment. Hoover's Food Plea

Some of President Roosevelt's advisers are preparing to take issue with former President Herbert Hoover on whether the United States should feed the peoples of Nazi-occupied Europe, The Post learned yesterday.

A grim sparring match on this question between the Administration and Mr. Hoover is expected to follow President Roosevelt's return to the Capital, scheduled for today.

The Administration view, it was learned, is that the United States should not be a party to the weakening of the British blockade, and should not exert pressure on the British government to allow food ships to reach the European continent.

"Wholesale Starvation" Feared

This stand contrasts with Mr. Hoover's plea Sunday at Colorado Springs that 27,000,000 men, women and children of Europe face "wholesale starvation" unless they receive food from the United States and other neutral nations.

It contrasts also with the remarks of John Cudahy, Minister to Belgium, who was reprimanded and called home last week by the State Department after saying that 8,000,000 people in western Europe would starve unless aided by neutral nations.

Authoritative British spokesmen have already declared that the London government will not lift its blockade for food shipments to German-conquered nations of Europe. They contend there is sufficient food in Europe if Germany will share it "fairly."

Political Question, Too

According to observers, the President does not intend to be maneuvered into a position where he could be branded in political speeches as a "starver of hungry millions," but on the other hand he believes that for military reasons it would be unwise to help Germany solve her food problems.

The Administration attack on the proposal to feed Europe may be based, it was predicted, on the charge that this proposal is a form of appeasement of Germany.

The latest Administration blast against appeasement was delivered last week by Attorney General Jackson, who counseled against those who would "soften" Americans.

Backing for what is said to be the President's point of view was forthcoming yesterday from the American Red Cross. Officials of the relief agency said that their mail shows a "preponderance of letters opposing shipment of food to German-occupied Europe. The same trend is noted, they said, in newspaper editorials throughout the country.

Red Cross Seeks Permission

The Red Cross has shipped relief supplies valued at $2,589,000 to Great Britain since the war began, and every boat leaving for Britain carries more supplies. Shipments to portions of Europe under German control have virtually stopped, however, it was said. The Red Cross is negotiating in London for British permission to send supplies through the blockade.

Another obstacle to getting Red Cross supplies into France, Holland, Belgium and Norway, it was said, is that the Red Cross will require absolute assurance that the relief supplies reach the civilian population for whom they were intended.

A Presidential veto on sending food to Nazi-occupied Europe would not conflict with Mr. Roosevelt's request in June for $50,000,000 for relief of suffering in Europe, it was said.

The point to be noted, one Administration leader explained, is that the portion of this money that has been used has been applied to feeding people in Great Britain.

Along this line, Milo Perkins, president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, the agency that would supply the food to feed Europe, has said:

"We shall probably hear more and more, during the next few years, about solving our surplus agricultural problems by feeding and clothing the destitute peoples of other continents, particularly those ravaged by war. I should like to suggest, however, that we remember the millions of youngsters we are pumping into our own society every year on 5 cents a meal."

"Answer to Nazi Pretense"

London (Tuesday) Aug. 13 (AP).—The Times of London, advocated today a post-war relief plan for Europe in cooperation with the United States and other overseas countries as "the most effective answer to the Nazi pretense that British policy is bringing starvation to Europe."

In an editorial commenting on the proposal of former President Hoover to send food to German-occupied territories, The Times, along with the rest of the British press, declared this could not be done without playing into German hands.

A British spokesman declared yesterday the blockade would be maintained and held that food for occupied lands depended on "fair distribution by Germany, which has an abundance of supplies."

There was no official comment on the Hoover proposal, however, since it had not been submitted to the Government, although it was understood that Hugh Gibson, Hoover's representative, had talked to British authorities.

U. S. "Regarded by Nazis as Hostile"

Remarking that "the United States is more or less openly regarded by Nazi Germany as a hostile power," the Times contended "no form of neutral control could be devised which would afford the slightest guarantee against abuse of any philanthropic enterprise."

The newspaper asserted, however, that Britain's answer to proposals to send food to German-occupied lands, it said, "must be a double one. That it is Hitler who is starving Europe, and that it is Britain and those who sympathized with her cause who are making active preparations to feed Europe so soon as the present tyranny is overthrown."

Reaction in Berlin

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 12.—The official reaction to former President Herbert Hoover's relief plan as yet is not forthcoming in Berlin. Authoritative quarters, however, predict that the Wilhelmstrasse will approve and give assistance to such a project, treating it "with the same loyalty as was displayed toward similar plans advanced by the president of the American Red Cross."

The Germans, however, are much incensed at the British atttitude toward Mr. Hoover's project, and it is stated with authority here that it is Britain, not Germany, who has the "moral obligation" to supply these occupied countries with food.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Packing For The Camp

"Here's another suitcase," said Mrs. Twitchell, as Mr. Twitchell worked desperately to pack the flivver for the trip to the summer camp. "And don't forget we've got to get Junior's outboard motor in somehow."

"You told me there was nothing more to go in," snapped Elmer.

Mrs. Twitchell barged up to the car with her mother, Little Patricia, Junior, the baby and the dog. "Maybe some of us should get in now," she said.

"You can climb over that box of pots and pans and sit in front," said Elmer to the wife. "You'll have to hold the baby in your lap. Patricia can squeeze in between the barrel of dishes and the folding boat."

Mrs. Twitchell and Patricia did their best to do as directed while Mr. Twitchell lifted up the dog and shoved the animal on top of a box of hats. He then proceeded to pack in some fishing equipment, a steamer trunk, a radio set, two beach chairs, a vacuum cleaner and a basket of odds and ends.

"Now you get in," he barked to Mrs. Twitchell's mother who was standing by with a bag in each hand.

"Where? How?" asked his mother-in-law feebly.

"Over in back of the lawn mower, just to the right of the crab net. And don't crowd the dog," ordered Elmer.

"I can't make it in that space," argued the old lady.

"I've studied it all out," insisted Elmer. "You'll just fit in."

His mother-in-law struggled to obey orders. Elmer shoved her strenuously, but one of her legs still protruded from the doorway. He drew back panting, and snapped at his wife, "See! Your mother's too long!"

"Get her leg in," demanded Mrs. Twitchell.

"It won't go in," snapped Elmer as he tried to bend it a little, bringing screams and a cry of "Stop twisting my ankle!" from the old lady.

"Do you know what the trouble with you is?" demanded Elmer of his disheveled mother-in-law.

"No," she answered.

"You won't cooperate. If you'd turn over on your stomach, crawl up a little higher over that black handbag and draw up your left knee we could make it."

"Let me out," roared the lady. "I'll stay home."

"It's too late," snapped Elmer. "I couldn't get you out without unpacking the whole car. Have you no patience?" He looked at her protruding leg. "If you had only one leg everything would be swell."

Elmer then started to climb into the driver's seat when Junior suddenly appeared and asked, "Where do I go?"

"You!" exclaimed Elmer. "I thought you were packed in behind the ironing board and the garden hose."

"That was the boy next door. He's riding part of the way with us," said Junior.

Nautical Note

It is good to see the old Sound steamer, Richard Peck, back gliding up and down Long Island Sound these summer days, after a long absence. Once the queen of the Sound fleet, she has been more or less missing for years. This department caught glimpses of her, dirty and neglected, up around Bridgeport now and then, but this season, white and sleek and looking her best, she is in service between New York and New Haven again, her decks crowded, and a pretty picture against the summer horizon. We remember when folks along the Connecticut coast could tell time by the movements of the Peck. Capt. Bill Hardy in charge, and always going through the ritual of giving a few toots to his pals at the New Haven Yacht Club as he came by the breakwater.

Thus I spoke
As I awoke.
'Twas language I was not accustomed to,
Yet thus I spoke.
"As I awoke?" Nay
The word's inept—
I had not slept
But spent the night
In tossing east to west,
Then in reverse—
Till dawn gave birth to day.
And so I say—
Humidity, ancestor of my discontent,
Go away! S. B.

Enlightened Debate

By Mark Sullivan

Draft Speeches Inspire Confidence

WHAT IS HERE written about the conscription bill is based on the debate in Congress, which debate is on the whole intelligent and enlightened to a degree that inspires confidence—the country may feel sure that Congress will arrive at a wise conclusion.

The debate so far reveals some conditions about which the country is confused. One confusion has to do with time and numbers. The country has heard that by the present bill 12,000,000 men would be registered, all the males between the ages of 21 and 31. By the earlier version of the bill, 42,000,000 were to be registered, all males between 18 and 64. From these figures, the public has got the idea there is to be an immense army, and at an early date.

The fact is, as appears from the debate, it is not seriously intended to have, within a year, an effective army of more than 750,000. If for no other reason, it would be impossible to equip a larger army within a year, or even within 18 months. Chairman Knudsen of the National Defense Commission told a Senate committee last week, as quoted by Senator Vandenberg, that "it will be 1942 before there would be complete equipment for 750,000 men."

FOR ACHIEVING an army of this size, we have as a start the existing Regular Army. Its present number is about 275,000 (the number increases materially each day, with new enlistments). In addition, there is the National Guard, relied upon to provide some 250,000. This would make about 525,000 in all. To make up the within-a-year army of 750,000, there would be needed some 225,000 new soldiers.

The question is, could we get this number, within a reasonable time—say, within four or five months—by the method of voluntary enlistment? Many in Congress say we could. In order to encourage enlistment, some would raise the pay, from the present $21 a month to $30, which, of course, is in addition to food, lodging, uniforms and other essentials. To the same end, there are proposals to reduce the enlistment period, from a present three years to one.

It would seem there should be a large number of young men eager to take the good job which the Army is. Many should be found among the unemployed, said to total some 10,000,000. On three Government-aid projects—Civilian Conservation Corps, National Youth Administration, and Works Progress Administration—there are a total of some 2,500,000, all receiving small stipends from the Government, and all given these stipends on the theory that they cannot get jobs elsewhere. They were taken in before the defense expansion program offered the present Army jobs. Many of these, especially in CCC and NYA, should be able to meet the Army tests.

THE PENDING conscription bill would not rely upon voluntary enlistment. It would register the 12,000,000 men between 21 and 31, but would make early use of only a comparatively small number. It is contemplated, if the bill passes, that some 400,000 would be called in October for a year's training, and another 400,000 next April. The training of these would look toward a larger army in the future. But even the contemplated future army would not be as large as is commonly supposed. There are various estimates of what the size of the future army should be, from a minimum total of 750,000 up to 1,300,000.

From all the conditions, many in Congress are led to believe there is no imperative hurry about passing this particular conscription bill. Out of this feeling has arisen a suggestion that we go on with the voluntary enlistment method until next January and then, if voluntary enlistment has not produced enough, consider a conscription bill. This suggestion has been put into the form of an amendment by Senator Maloney, of Connecticut. It has much support.

There is another widespread confusion. It was put in words by Congressman William J. Miller, of Connecticut: "The Burke-Wadsworth bill attempts to solve two separate problems in one piece of legislation. It attempts to provide the man power which is needed right now . . . and it also attempts to provide a training program for young men who will be trained at some time in the near future when we may need them."

THERE IS also a confusion between conscription for "service" and conscription for "training." Conscription for service is more serious and goes farther in departure from habitual American thought. Conscription for mere training, on the other hand, would not be so seriously contrary to the American tradition. In a sense we already have conscription for training—in the sense that every State government requires, as a compulsory matter, that children shall be sent to school for a fixed period. For the Federal Government to require that these youths, about the time they finish their schooling, shall undergo a period of training would not run violently counter to American practice. Such conscription for training would be literally universal. It would not be selective, there would be no immunities and no mechanism of draft boards.

Social Security Agency Spends $3,000,000,000 in First 5 Years

50,000,000 Workers Are Registered Under Program Marking Fifth Birthday; Widows, Blind, Jobless, Others Helped

By the Associated Press

The Government's social security program, five years old this week, has distributed $3,000,000,000 to the Nation's aged and unemployed workers and to widows, orphans and the blind.

In advance of its anniversary tomorrow, the Social Security Board drew up a statistical picture of its vast operations to show that some 50,000,000 workers had been enrolled in the program since President Roosevelt signed the act in 1935.

Established after a long study of European experiences, the social security program pours its benefits through a half-dozen outlets which are either exclusive Federal enterprizes or joint undertakings of Nation and State.

Its "insurance" benefits for the aged and unemployed are financed by pay roll taxes, while direct grants from Federal and State treasuries sustain the public assistance features for the young, the old and the helpless in need.

At the top of the program is the old-age and survivors insurance system, which pays out monthly benefits to workers who retire at 65, and to their wives, widows and orphans. Up to June 30, this system has paid $38,000,000 to 102,941 persons.

Unemployment compensation, which gives insured workers a moderate weekly sum during a limited number of weeks of joblessness, is reported to have distributed more than $1,000,000,000 in out-of-work benefits.

Of the more than 28,000,000 commercial and industrial workers covered by the insurance, about 1,500,000 new jobless are drawing unemployment compensation.

To find jobs for the insured idle, the social security system has taken over the employment service. It has been credited with filling 5,000,000 jobs during 1939 and the first six months of 1940.

The public assistance phases of the program, distinct from the old-age and jobless insurance systems, are operated through joint Federal-State machinery to provide, on a basis of need, financial care for the aged unable to qualify for insurance benefits, for the needy blind, and for dependent children.

The public assistance operation, officials reported, aids some 3,000,000 persons every month, among them 1,983,900 aged, 807,900 children and 48,000 blind. The expenditure for this part of the system has totaled about $1,900,000,000.

For the future the Social Security Board has projected studies for extending security to classes of workers and self-employed persons not now eligible.

The board's most immediate aim, however, is to amend the law to protect the insurance benefits accumulated by persons who may be drafted for military service, and to establish a system of variable grants enabling poorer States to make more adequate contributions to the needy under the public assistance program.

Water Carnival Nets Silver Spring Red Cross $91

A check for $91 was presented Mrs. James S. Wilson chairman of roll call for the Silver Spring branch, Montgomery County Chapter, American Red Cross, yesterday as proceeds of the water carnival put on by the children of Manor Country Club members Sunday at the club. The affair was especially held for the benefit of the Silver Spring branch.

Mrs. Rugo Wrinkler, production chairman of the branch, yesterday announced that headquarters for sewing and knitting at Grace Episcopal church, Woodside, will be open Mondays and Thursdays from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. instead of daily throughout August.

Economic Fight On Japan Urged At Baptist Parley

Massanetta Springs, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Dr. Walter H. Judd, who has just completed four years as a medical missionary in north China, told the Virginia Baptist Assembly here yesterday that the United States should use its economic and material resources to check Japan's advance in China.

"Nonviolent methods can succeed only if there is not too much delay, he said.

"On the one hand we send missionaries to preach good news to the people of China," Dr. Judd added, "while on the other hand we still send war materials to Japan to destroy the Chinese. America has had security in the Far East all of these years because the British navy was there and policed it for us. Now Britain has had to withdraw and America is going to have to make a very drastic decision in the next few weeks, or days."

'Polio' Cases Rise To 30 in Vicinity Of Huntington

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Health Department officials reported a case of infantile paralysis in nearby Coesapeake, Ohio, across the Ohio River today, bringing to 30 the number of cases in the immediate vicinity.

Parents were reported sending their children out of this section of the Southern Ohio Valley, fearful of a serious epidemic, but Dr. W. W Strange, city health officer, emphasized the situation was not "out of control" and that it had not been necessary to impose a general quarantine.

Two deaths in Huntington and more than two score cases of paralysis have been reported in this West Virginia, Ohio, and Kentucky area in the past two weeks.

Hundreds of Needy Get 5-Cent Milk

MILK DISTRIBUTION STATION
BOARD OF PUBLIC WELFARE
In Cooperation With the U.S. Department of Agriculture
Station No. 5

By Scott Hart

A lot of thin, serious-faced children turned excited over something newer than ball games and candy and fun here yesterday.

They went in droves to the eleven 5-cent relief milk depots, their faces serious enough and their feet hurrying. Mostly, they approached the counters grimly and some of them held to the milk bottles tightly as fearful somebody might take them before they could get back home.

Their elders came too, and like the children poked across the counters the yellow cards which prove certification on public relief rolls. The attendants, who inspected the cards and checked them against eligibility cards, in small file cases on the counters, were sympathetic.

One attendant said it should prove a popular relief enterprise, the cutting down of milk prices to families who scarcely could afford any price; and the giving of employment to the attendants who dispense the milk and keep the records.

"This is the first day I've worked myself in 18 months," one of them beamed.

It was the first day and a few kinks must be taken out, said Otto J. Cass, general superintendent of Public Assistance. Some of the patrons didn't understand the procedure.

For example, one man came to the depot at 476 C street northwest, saying he wanted a bottle of buttermilk.

The idea chiefly that set the Board of Public Welfare, the Agriculture Department and the relief agencies at work on the cheap milk plan was, of course, to make rich milk available to undernourished children, expectant mothers and the needy sick.

The depots are not hot weather cool drink emporiums, it was emphasized. Only persons with certification cards can buy the cheap milk.

Others wondered why they paid 8 cents for the milk yesterday. This was because a 3-cent deposit is required on the special type of bottle used. The persons who paid 8 cents a quart yesterday will only pay 5 cents when returning for milk again—provided they return the bottle. These bottles are of a type not used commercially in Washington and carry a cap warning against resale of the milk.

The certification cards brought some confusion. These, to date, have been mailed to eligibles by the Welfare Board. Some prospective purchasers brought in the sample identification cards the newspapers printed.

Again, many persons to whom cards were issued neglected to sign them. In these instances, the cards, without signature, were brought in by some child or relative of the holder and the milk could not be issued.

The regulations permit one pint of milk a day to each member of an eligible family who is under 17. The same applies to expectant or nursing mothers. A half pint a day is allotted to persons over 17. Dietary needs will be considered, and adjustments made if necessary.

The depots will remain open from 1 to 5 p. m. daily, except Sundays and holidays.

Odd Jobs

Memorial Bridge Tender Also Life-Guard

By George Thorpe.

In the office of Edwin C. Atkinson, chief overseer of the Arlington Memorial Bridge, the rumble of traffic blends into the wash and slap of the Potomac.

The office is a cave, part of a network of passageways and vaults hollowed out inside one of the giant granite piles that support the $7,250,000 span.

To reach the overseer's headquarters you climb 10 feet down a spiral ladder. There you find a cubicle, roughly 6 feet by 10, containing the usual desk, swivel chair and filing cases.

But hard by the desk is the mouth of the cave, a glass-enclosed opening that looks out on the criss-crossing steel girders that form the underpinning of the huge draw and a part of the central span curving over a patch of sky.

A doorway opens on a narrow steel platform. To stand there on a gusty day is to feel you are on the top deck of a ship. The wind whistles through the girders as through rigging and below the muddy water froths up like soapsuds around the pilings.

A special pride of jovial, 47-year-old Atkinson, who lives at 4936 First street northwest, are the 4,000-volt electric induction motors that hoist the draw, each leaf of which weighs 6,000 tons. (When flood waters swirled up around them in 1932, Akinson stood guard over them day and night for 96 hours.)

Surprisingly simple is the apparatus in the control room, a glass-enclosed chamber on the same level. A light connecting with a signal device on the roadway level flashes green when the draw is to be raised. There are two sets of levers, one an emergency brake, the other that which actually sets the draw in motion.

Rising on an average of once daily in summer and twice as frequently in winter, the draw accommodates any ships, however small, whose masts are taller than 32 feet, the clearance of the span.

But no longer amusing to the bridge staff are the specially rigged canoes which insist on their prerogative rather than haul down "fish pole" masts. Adding to the staff's annoyance is the fact that to open the draw means tying up a torrent of traffic that pours across the span at the rate of 2,000 cars an hour during rush hours.

Atkinson and his staff devote much of their time to such routine business as preventing souvenir hunters from chipping the bridge granite and in responding to look-outs for "wanted" autos coming from police over the bridge's short-wave radio.

Most unusual of the overseer's duties, however, is that required of him as unofficial life guard. A skiff moored at the base of the central pile stands always ready to rush to rescue of capsized boaters. Not long ago one of Atkinson's staff saw a kayak overturn a short distance above the bridge. He jumped into the skiff, raced to the scene, and pulled an elderly woman from the water. The bridge attendant then brought her back to the security of the bridge, only to receive a merciless tongue-lashing because he failed to dive for her pocketbook.

ATKINSON AT THE CONTROLS

Kerensky, British Refugees Arrive

Former President Of Russia Urges Help for England

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 12.—With 774 passengers aboard, including 182 British refugee children, the Cunard-White Star liner Scythia arrived here today from Liverpool to complete her ninth wartime westward crossing.

Among the passengers were Alexander Kerensky, the former provisional president of Russia, and his wife, and Maj. Gen. Ridley Pakenham Walsh, the head of a British military mission sent here to advise the British purchasing commission in this country.

Kerensky urged all remaining democracies to assist England in its war against Germany, describing Great Britain as "the last hope of Europe." England, he said, is in a better position to fight Germany than was France because the English people have buried all differences and are united.

Politics Came First

In France, even during the war, Kerensky declared, political factions continued to pursue their own ends and refused to forget their private differences in the interest of the country.

While Kerensky refused to dwell on his difficulties in escaping from France, his wife, the former Mrs. Lydia Tretton, of Australia, told of their harrowing experiences.

They left Paris in an automobile on June 11, she said. Then, for 18 days, they were on the road, often sleeping there, suffering from a shortage of food and encountering considerable difficulty in purchasing gasoline.

"We were bombed in Paris and on the road near Chartres," she said. "We saw dreadful things on the roads. We tried to get to Hendaye and cross from Spain to England, but we couldn't make it. Finally we got to St. Jean de Luz, where, after trying to get on several ships, the British naval authorities let us aboard a British boat, the last to leave from the south of France."

Scoffs at Nazi Claims

Maj. Gen. Walsh, who was accompanied by Lt. Col. Donald Campion and Capt. Eric Tatham, his aides, scoffed at German claims of great victories against England in the air and suggested that German reports should be "divided by five or ten."

Maj. Gen. Walsh, who was engineer in chief of the British Expeditionary Forces during the evacuation of Dunkirque, said English claims can be accepted as "gospel." He contended that "only one ship in 600 under British convoy has been badly hit."

Great Britain, he said, has profited by the respite following the defeat of France, and is now "ready for anything, although he would like a few weeks more to prepare."

He admitted there was a possibility that Germany may try an invasion through the southern part of Ireland. In the northern section of that country, where he was stationed after recuperating from a wound received at Dunkirque, the British are not building fortifications, he said.

Anti-British Feeling Flares In Tokyo

Official Pressure Indicated for Other Peoples to Leave China

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Aug. 12.—New arrests of foreigners were reported today amid a flare-up of anti-British feeling in Tokyo and signs of official pressure on other nations to withdraw from China.

Domei, Japanese news agency, reported that 19 foreigners had been arrested at Dairen, in the Japanese-leased territory of Kwantung, on charges of disseminating anti-Japanese propaganda and possessing short wave radios.

Their names and nationalities were not disclosed. Most persons previously jailed in Korea and Japan proper in an anti-espionage campaign have been British.

About 3,000 demonstrators at an anti-British mass meeting beneath German, Italian and Japanese flags were restrained by police from marching on the British Embassy here.

They adopted resolutions demanding Britain's full withdrawal from the Far East and advocating closer Rome-Berlin-Tokyo ties.

Britain already has announced her decision to transfer her troops from China.

Before the meeting convened, Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, had hinted that other nations should consider withdrawing their military forces in China.

(A Japanese embassy spokesman in Shanghai said it was believed the small Italian contingent and the French force, stationed in the French concession, will follow the British example.)

Shanghai, Aug. 12 (AP).—A Japanese military spokesman declined today to deny reports that Japan is contemplating movement of her troops through French Indo-China to strike at China.

French Open 'War Guilt' Trial Today

Prosecutor to Present Complaint, Demand Secret Investigations

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Aug. 12.—France, swiftly reorganizing civilian life in her shriveled territory, awaited tonight the opening of court actions to punish leaders who took her into the disastrous war with Germany.

Public Prosecutor Cassagnau will present a complaint and demand secret investigations and hearings tomorrow when the supreme "war guilt" tribunal—whose judgment will be final—meets at Riom. Names of those to be called were not announced.

A few hours after the tribunal convenes, Chief of State Marshal Petain will address the nation in a radio broadcast set for 7:30 p. m. (2:30 p. m., E. S. T.).

Petain is expected to outline his government's organization difficulties and demand national cooperation.

Ministers Confer

Members of the ministry and other officials from occupied and unoccupied sections conferred late Monday on problems of reorganization and corrodinating French industry.

The ministers announced that decrees would be issued soon aiding industrialists in reopening their factories, transporting unemployed to districts where they can be given work, and that the schools would reopen September 1 with a reading by teachers of the new government's plans to form a national youth organization.

As demobilization reached its final stages, the government restored railroads in unoccupied areas to civil authority under the communications ministry, ending wartime military control.

Demobilization will be completed Wednesday, it was announced today, with release of the last specialists, such as butchers and bakers.

2,000,000 Captured

Of the approximately 5,000,000 men mobilized during the war, it now is admitted that 2,000,000 were captured by the Germans. No considerable number of these have been released so far.

The notice of demobilization advised men whose homes are in Nazi-occupied France that their return there will depend on the facilities accorded by the Germans. None who live north of a line running along the Somme and Aisne Rivers to St. Dizier, Chaumont and Dole will be permitted to return for the time being.

Boy Scouts Begin Project to Vitalize Democracy in U.S.

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Boy Scouts of America—1,400,000 strong—have launched a Nation-wide program "to vitalize democracy in the United States as the paramount requisite of National defense."

This was announced today by Dr. James E. West, chief scout executive who disclosed the chief factor will be the distribution by scouts of a pledge containing these declarations:

"To join wholeheartedly and with personal sacrifice in strengthening the work of our organizations and of other civic and social activities in our community, our State and our Nation.

"To be vigilant and courageous in maintaining human sympathy and respect for the rights of others.

"To beware of the enemies of democracy, whatever their passwords or places of birth, and wherever they may be found.

"To stand united with all lovers of freedom, whatever their tongue or origin.

"To keep our Nation strong in valor, and confident in freedom, so that Government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish on earth."

Ill Pupils in D. C. Lose 600 Years Of School in Year

Six hundred years of school were lost by Washington children last year because of illness, it was reported yesterday by Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the school medical inspection service.

"Most of it could have been prevented," he said.

Dr. Murphy stressed the importance of taking children into clinics now, or having family physicians give them thorough examinations. If tonsils have to come out, this is the best time of year for the child's recuperation, he stated. He listed other helpful hints to parents as follows:

Teeth should be examined and dental work done.

Remember that diphtheria is as preventable as smallpox. Have the child immunized against these diseases now.

Teach your child the simple rules of healthful living. A well-balanced diet, plenty of sleep and out-of-door exercise are essential. A child should be taught personal cleanliness and how to keep himself well groomed. These are a part of daily health habits.

Keeping to a regular schedule for meals and bedtime will give a sense of order and balance to a child's day.

Your child is ready for big adventure . . . school. Give him a good start without any health handicaps.

Elwood Awaits Day Of Willkie's Return

All Roads Lead to Their Town, Residents of Nominee's Home City Believe; 200,000 Visitors Expected in Day

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"A LOTTA BIG society folks from Washington are a-coming out for the celebration. But we'll be ready for 'em. Elwood people know how to do things right."

So said an eager-eyed stripling, whose trim Boy Scout uniform looked as if it had just been taken out of the box. He was in charge of the principal information booth set up in front of the Elwood High School, and he had an answer for everything.

Hope Ridings Miller

No, he wasn't surprised that I had turned up in Wendell Willkie's home town, just to look it over briefly on my way back to Washington at vacation's end. He took it for granted that all roads are leading to Elwood these days and he has been queried by so many newspaper reporters recently that answering questions is all in a day's work.

He can hardly wait for August 17 to roll around. Why, the ceremonies planned for that day will outdo anything the town has ever had—including the annual tomato festival that always brings a crowd from surrounding communities.

My visit to Elwood was a between-trains affair, but I stayed long enough to stroll the length of Anderson street, the main thoroughfare, to drop in for a brief chat with Mayor George Bonham, and to call on several other Elwoodites. Yes, the town's practically ready for the big event, the mayor told me. Big-wigs from all over the United States are expected ("they tell me even Dolly Gann, Mrs. Vandenberg, Mrs. Taft will be here," he said). If the crowd on hand for Willkie's big speech doesn't exceed 200,000, Mayor Bonham will be disappointed.

"Trouble is, though, most of the crowd will arrive that morning and leave that night. Wish they'd stay long enough to see the town."

Mrs. Willkie Was 'Pretty Miss Wilk'

Willkie banners, buttons and photographs decorate show windows all over the business section. There is a sharp smell of fresh paint up one street and down the others. Lawns are being mowed a mile a minute; there's not a weed left in a flower bed, and so far as I could see wholesale fence-mending was finished several days ago.

Conversation on every street corner seems to revolve around Willkie. Apparently everybody in town either grew up with him or is related to somebody who did; and it takes little or no coaxing to gather stories about him. Less seems to be remembered about "pretty little Miss Edith Wilk" who quietly went about her duties at the public library, but almost everybody in Elwood can, and will, tell you that Miss Wilk earned $65 a month when she worked there; that that was a good bit more than she had been making in Rushville, and that any number of handsome swains about town tried to get dates with her.

At Doc Hinshaw's drug store (one of Elwood's most prosperous business places) and at the popular Golden Garden dance hall on Anderson street, everybody I met had another story to add to the Willkie legend. Several anecdotes I heard centered around Wendell's father, who was nicknamed "Hell Fire" Willkie; built up a successful law practice; dabbled in real estate on the side; made a lot of money and then lost it all in the panic of 1893.

Social Arbiter Is Former Classmate

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Willkie, Wendell's uncle and aunt ,and their daughter, the former Julia Willkie (now Mrs. Edward Sturbois)—the only Willkies still living in Elwood—are making big plans to entertain the Republican Presidential nominee and his wife while they are in town. Frank Willkie, retired tin mill employe, and his wife live in a modest frame house that has centered the Elwood spotlight ever since Wendell hit the headlines. Incidentally, Mr. Willkie is quite confident his nephew's next address will be the White House.

"I always felt that boy would get somewhere like that," he said.

Mrs. Fay Leeson Houston, former schoolmate of Wendell Willkie, lives in one of the handsomest houses in town, an English-style structure set off with neat flower beds and shrubbery. She was amused, but not displeased, that a recent magazine dubbed her "Elwood's closest approach to a social dictator."

I came away from Elwood-on-a-boom with an endless fund of anecdotes about Wendell Willkie; a definite impression that the Republican white hope is at least one "prophet" with honor in his own country. I came away, also, with a feeling that consistency must indeed be a jewel of little minds, for the man who has put Elwood, Ind., on the map has keyed himself to continual change ever since he was a small boy, slipping away from school for a swim in Duck Creek.

Many Changes Mark Career

When he was still in high school, he changed his church affiliation from Methodist to Episcopal. Entering the University of Indiana later, he registered as Lewis Wilkie (one "L"), but by the time he was graduated he had decided he preferred to be known as Wendell L. Willkie. The extra "L" in the name came after that.

During his first three college years, he refused to join a fraternity. As the most powerful "voice" and leader of the non-fraternity contingent, he hurled many a blast at the Greek letter group that tried to control politics and the social whirl on the Indiana campus. But in the latter part of his senior year, he joined Beta Theta Pi, of which Paul V. McNutt was president. And of course everybody knows by now that not so long ago he changed his political stripe from Democratic to Republican.

Well, as Mayor Bonham of Elwood observed, "It takes a smart man to know when to change his mind."

Fate Throws Woman in Company of Former Husband, Reviving Her Love, Threatening Her New Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago I divorced my husband and within six months was married again—to a man who seemed to possess all the virtues my first husband lacked. This man is most kind and considerate and our home life is infinitely more quiet and peaceful than I ever thought it could be.

However, throughout the time we have been married, thoughts of my first husband have continually tormented me. I am beginning to realize that even the material comforts and peaceful atmosphere of my present marriage cannot compensate for the loss of my first husband, whom I love. Since I have been brought up to shun hypocrisy, I feel that this state of affairs cannot continue.

To make matters worse, Fate seems determined to throw us together. My former husband has returned to this city and because we have mutual acquaintances, I see him rather often. It is becoming more and more evident that my feelings are shared by him, and because of his outspoken nature, I fear that a crisis may soon develop. He is not the sort of man who would hesitate to make his feelings known, and therefore it is inevitable that my present husband will soon begin to suspect the truth of the situation.

If I were of different disposition, it would be easy to fool my husband into believing that I care nothing for his predecessor. But I cannot practice such deceit and still keep my self-respect. So do you think I should try to? On the other hand, if I should return to my first husband, I would have no assurance that we could make a success of a second trial. Still, I am so madly in love with him that I would be willing to venture anything, just to be with him.

Because the situation is worrying me a great deal, I wish you would give me your best advice based on the most careful consideration of what I have told you. Sincerely,

UNCERTAIN WIFE.

Folly of Pursuing 'A Will o' the Wisp

DEAR U. W.: Grace Ayer Barnes has written a novel, "Westward Passage," which deals with a wife's well nigh overpowering temptation to give up the monied security and unromantic placidity of her second marriage, in order to join forces once more with her divorced first husband, who still had the power to fire her imagination and disturb her emotions, in spite of the fact that their initial efforts to make a happy life together had fizzled out miserably AND INEVITABLY.

The climax of the story (as I recall it, from one casual reading some years ago) has to do with the wife's eleventh-hour realization of just how inevitable (and, indeed, how essential to the development and welfare of both) their divorcement was. She was able to see, at long last, the real import of their conjugal conflict—a conflict which led to separation for the reason that, basically, they had nothing of real value in common on which to build a life together.

She was able to evaluate, for what it was worth, the inutile quality of their romantic appeal to each other's imagination; an appeal that was of mirage substance; that could only take form to the distant view; that would of its very nature dissolve on close approach, and particularly upon any attempt to burden it with literal usage or realistic requirements.

The labyrinthine implications and complications of divorce form a recurrent theme in Mrs. Barnes' rather civilized novels, and, in my opinion, she demonstrates remarkable intuitive insight into modern-day feminine psychology in her handling of this difficult subject. I feel that most of her analyses and deductions have considerable validity and broad applicability. And I surmise that in "Westward Passage" she has captured your story in essence—both as to what has happened and as to what might yet develop, if you were to engage in a second round of emotional adventure with your former husband.

So I advise you to read this book—making due allowances for the heroine's somewhat glamorous setup as contrasted to your own more prosaic situation—and see if you don't agree with Mrs. Barnes and me that you are hungering after a will o' the wisp and not after a bona fide, retrievable chance at happiness or self-realization.

I daresay you married the man primarily because he cast some spell over your fancy which led you to think he was a personality distinctly different from what he proved to be. You found it impossible to live with the real person. Hence you parted. But you never relinquished the mental image you had conjured about him. Nor have you been able to identify that dream-figure with any other man; and certainly not with your second husband.

Hence the phantasy continues to trouble your thoughts, with its taunting false promise of some perfection of love not concomitant with wedded reality. You are on the verge of letting a fiction of your own concocting betray you for a second time. And the only way to avoid this fool's performance is to snap out of the day dream and get ahead with a program of wide-awake, down-to-earth, realistic fulfillment. M. H.

Keep Mind Off Meals While Dieting

Reducing Is Easy When Right Mental Attitude Is Held

By Ida Jean Cain

DIETING isn't the hardest thing about going on a diet—thinking about it is!

Take the woman who has overindulged in calories for too long . . . . Of course, eating is important to her! Otherwise, she wouldn't be overweight! But it doesn't become an obsession until she cuts down, deliberately, and with the intention of taking off some of those pounds.

Then, the more she gives up, the more she thinks about what she is missing, and the hungrier she gets! She tantalizes herself with the thought of the delicate flavor of the cream of mushroom soup, the crisp fried chicken and the lemon meringue pie! The diet is a struggle from one course to the next and the odds are all against her!

Keep Your Mind Off Diet Troubles

Don't punish yourself unnecessarily while dieting. Don't anticipate the meals that are going to be smaller than usual or sit at the table through the dessert course.

When you have breakfast don't think about the three months you'll have to go without all the cream and sugar you like in your coffee in order to lose that 25 pounds. Pat yourself on the back that you are having a pretty good breakfast for just 250 calories, so that you are bound to lose weight. And another thing, you can say to yourself that by tomorrow morning your food capacity will have diminished and the same meals will seem like more food!

At noon you don't fare so badly. You can have all of 350 calories, which allows for bouillon, a salad and a sandwich. Then, to break the stretch between lunch and dinner, you can have hot tea with a lump of sugar or a glass of skim milk. None of these supplies more than 80 calories and the pick-me-up in the afternoon is a very good way of getting your mind off dinner.

Dinner Can Be Satisfying

Dinner for 600 calories can be such a satisfying meal that if you didn't plan it yourself you would scarcely know you were on a diet. You are entitled to lean meat, two vegetables, a salad, dessert and a demitasse. And on that meal you are losing weight!

There you are with the day gone and you have done what you set out to do. Every meal has been below your calorie requirement, and the net result is that you have been able to convert some of your stored fat into energy. That's all reducing amounts to.

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Oldest Women's Society in Country Maintains Historic Mount Vernon

NINE OUT OF TEN visitors to Mount Vernon think the Nation's No. 1 estate is owned and operated by the United States Government. Actually it is the property of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, oldest women's patriotic organization in the country and probably the only group of its kind which manages without internal politics. Unobtrusively and efficiently, these women for 82 years have gone about their business of maintaining and restoring Washington's home.

Present regent is Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, widow of the former Representative from Iowa and Governor of Puerto Rico. Like her five predecessors in the office, she was appointed for life and serves without remuneration. From the association's headquarters—a one-story building modeled after the Mount Vernon greenhouse, just outside the exhibition area—she handles the countless problems which arise each day on a 475-acre estate. She also supervises the carefully planned job of restoring the empty, run-down building acquired by the association in 1858 to the gracious manor house of Washington's day.

A girl doing research one hot afternoon in the main reading room of the Library of Congress slipped off her pumps and was horrified to discover later that she could not get them on again. As she struggled futilely she heard a dignified male voice beside her say, "Why don't you try a file card?" With the aid of her fellow researcher and a shoehorn composed of file cards, she soon was shod again. She now wears sandals on her research expeditions.

For the benefit of Texas delegates to the Democratic Convention who thought they heard an English accent in their midst, here's the explanation: They did. It belonged to Mrs. Esmond Romilly, whose husband (a nephew of Winston Churchill) recently left to join the Royal Air Force and who is now job-hunting in Washington. A visitor to the convention, she borrowed an alternate's badge and sat with Mr. and Mrs. Maury Maverick throughout the proceedings. She didn't have a chance to vote, because her delegate conscientiously stayed on the floor, but she enjoyed the hoax tremendously just the same. Her one bad break came when another delegate asked where she was from. She thought furiously for a moment and then said, "Phoenix." The questioner pointed out the geographic implausibility of her reply but did not succeed in fazing her. "My Phoenix is in Texas—a very small town you've probably never heard of," she explained.

CONVERSATION PIECE — Neptune Room: ". . . So I changed laundries, and the new driver was—well, good-looking enough to be a movie actor, and like a sap I went and told the two girls down the hall about him, and they said for me to give THEM a look the next time he came. So the next time, he had to go out and get some change, and I telephoned them, and when he got back there they were standing in the hall staring. I guess he thought they were crazy, . . ."

Perfect New Dance Steps

YES, a girl's social life takes a turn for the better when she teaches herself to dance really well.

No one wants to ask on a dancing foursome a girl who's a wet blanket—who knows only a step or two, who has to sit out smart dances like the rumba.

But master popular steps and styles—you can easily do that from diagrams—and you're invited often to smart places. Men are proud to take you out.

The rumba running step is simple to learn. Count 1—Take a short step forward on left foot. And take a short step forward on right foot. Count 2—Take short step forward on left foot. Then pause and repeat, beginning on right foot.

As easily you learn steps and characteristic styles of the smart Conga and tango. The Conga you dance erect with relaxed knees. In the tango step smoothly, precisely.

Busman's Holiday

Reform will not take a vacation even though Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey does. At her press conference yesterday the indefatigable president of the Do Something About It League announced plans for carrying on several crusades during her vacation. Mrs. DeGoofey will be gone a month and will devote part of that time to her annual tour of the bathing beaches of the country.

"One of the main things I expect to promote," she said, "is a series of men's bathing beauty contests. Now I have long felt that the majority of men in bathing suits were not—to say the least—esthetic sights. And yet despite their own questionable appearance on the sands, they have the temerity to be loudly critical of the shapes of women bathers.

"Now, the only way to make men figure conscious, I feel, is to make bathing beauty contests for them as general as the contests for women. Under my plan, of course, the judges of the men's contests would be women—and the older and homelier the better. Under such a plan I feel sure that most of the pot-bellied and bald beach combers will be driven to cover.

Male Beauties On Roto Pages

"Another advantage of my enterprise will be to provide some variety in newspaper photographs. Think what a relief it will be to have some man bathing beauties on the roto and picture pages for a change! In time I even hope to get some male Apollos on magazine covers."

"Do you plan any other reforms during your vacation?" asked a travel editor.

"Yes, indeed. I want to look after some of the numerous requests from my followers who have written asking me to have all sorts of things changed. Here is a letter I recently received:

"'DEAR MRS. DeGOOFEY: Will you please set the following to a loud howl?

"'Why must the chic, dainty novel styles in dresses all be reserved for size 16 and below? Is there a conspiracy against 18's and over? Have our lesser sisters instigated a combine in man-catcher clothes or something?

Why must women's anklets always be made of thick hot material? Our reason for wearing them is to keep cool. Why cannot some of them be devised of silk similar to ordinary hose?

"'With most of us loving to run barelegged about the house, or wherever the law allows in hot weather, why do they not invent a house or play shoe with some sort of oilcloth lining which can be cleansed with a damp cloth? CLARA LOUISE JOHN.'

Traveler's Curse—The Picture Postcard

"I am very glad to receive Mrs. John's suggestions for reform," said Mrs. DeGoofey, commenting on the letter, "and will look into the needs listed right away. I am always glad when my friends write me such ideas. The more reform we can stir up the more jobs for reformers. Now, here is another letter with a fine suggestion:

"'DEAR MRS. DeGOOFEY: Can't you do something to cut down the writing space on picture postcards? I am back from my vacation simply exhausted because I had to spend so much time trying to think of something to say to friends to whom I sent cards.

"'It is ten times as easy to write a letter in which you can ramble all over the lot as it is to think of something smart and snappy to say in a few words. Why can't we have a picture postcard with only room for the name of the receiver and the sender on it? INTROVERT.'

"I am very glad Introvert has raised this point. I know many women have had their vacations and other trips completely spoiled trying to be clever—or for that matter even intelligible—on picture postcard greetings. I think perhaps the simplest solution would be to have all souvenir cards printed with 'Having wonderful time, wish you were here,' with only a dotted line underneath for the name of the sender."

"How will you manage to look after so many vital and far-reaching reforms in one month?" asked a representative of the Economic Quarterly.

"Oh, that will be quite simple," was the reply. "I will appoint committees to look after everything."

After a flying trip to her home town of Utopia, Nebr., Mrs. DeGoofey will go directly to Baileys Beach, Newport, to organize her first men's bathing beauty contest.

Mrs. Aurelia Puffer-Swagg, famous authority on "Front," will substitute for Mrs. DeGoofey in this column during the latter's vacation.

Babies Digest Dairy-Modified Milk Easily

New research projects indicating the need for wider use of dairy-modified fresh milk in infant and child feeding were reported on by Dr. Henry G. Poncher, professor of pediatrics at the University of Illinois, and Dr. Irving Wolman, of Children's Hospital, Philadelphia, at the recent annual conference of the National Dairy Council in Chicago.

Dr. Poncher said that methods of improving the digestibility of fresh cow's milk for infant feeding by various processes at the dairy instead of in the kitchen are creating considerable interest. Homogenization, base exchange and enzyme treatment have been tested.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Children in the Sun

OFTEN mothers are so intent upon improving and preserving their own good looks that they forget to teach their small daughters the basic beauty needs. This is especially true in regard to sun tanning. Usually, the mother will saturate her own body with protective oils before exposure, but send her child in the hot sun without any precautions.

While children need the vitamin-producing ultra-violet rays, it is folly to expose their sensitive skins without taking adequate precautions. Too much sun not only burns and blisters, but toughens and coarsens the skin. Every mother should know of a good sunburn preparation that not only reduces the risk of sunburn by reducing the intensity of the burning rays, but one that allows the young to tan with comfort.

If the child is large enough, she should be taught to apply it to herself. Of course, if she is too small, then it is up to the mother to guard her skin. The amount and frequency with which any sun protective lotion is applied depends upon the individual sensitivity of the skin. With babies especially, proceed cautiously. At first apply it two or three times during the day. Always apply sunburn cream after the youngsters have been in water.

Guard 'War' Waits Hour for Trucks

First Virginia Saved By Bell From Moving Into Full Regiment

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent.

Rensselaer Falls, N. Y., Aug. 12.—The four infantry regiments of the Twenty-ninth Division marched to battle today, acquitted themselves with credit in two brief engagements and brought to an end the second phase of their training here.

Organized into combat teams for the first time in National Guard history, the regiments of the Ninety-first (Virginia) and Fifty-eighth (Maryland) Brigades spent a hot morning finding each other and banging away with blank cartridges. After the maneuver, the First Virginia and the 116th Infantry of the Ninety-first were reviewed by their commander, Col. John F. Bright, Mayor of Richmond, who published to them general order Number 1.

"The brigade commander," it said, "commends every officer, warrant officer and enlisted man of this brigade, and all attached personnel for their attention to duty, tactical training, high state of discipline and excellent morale. He is confident that in the ensuing field exercises your conduct will uphold the military traditions of Virginia, and that our Commonwealth shall take pride in the achievements of her sons."

Army Maneuvers Tested

The review was held in the new infantry formation, the regiments passing in mass. Their machine guns and heavy weapons were in line on trucks.

Tomorrow the entire division will take the field at 7:30 a. m., in trucks and afoot, for a two-day fight in the sector of the training area inclosed by Rensselaer Falls, Woodbridge Corners, Flackville, Northrup Corners and Heuvelton. As far as could be learned today, the Ninety-first Brigade will be the defending force, attacked by the Fifty-eighth, and the lines are expected to clash along State Highway 87 northeast of Heuvelton.

Organized in combat teams, after the fashion of those tried out by the Regular Army at Fort Benning, Ga., last year, the brigades will be compact units, each under the immediate control of its commander, with necessary auxiliary troops at hand for instant use as he wishes.

With the two infantry regiments of the Ninety-first will be the 111th Field Artillery, from Virginia; Company D, 121st Engineers, of Washington, and a detachment of the 104th Medical Regiment. The Fifty-eighth combat team will consist of the two infantry regiments, the 110th Field Artillery; Company A, 121st Engineers, and a detachment from the 104th Medical Regiment.

Battle Awaits Trucks

Each team will have with it a battalion of the monster 155mm. guns of Pennsylvania's 176th Field Artillery, and planes of the 104th Observation Squadron, Maryland National Guard, will act as observers for both.

Out along the Flackville-Woodbridge Corners road today the Virginia brigade completed its regimental maneuver woth a chorus of rifle fire and vocal enthusiasm that promised well for the big maneuvers to come. Delayed an hour by failure of trucks to arrive on schedule, time, the First Virginia, Richmond and eastern Virginia troops, reached the field late and jumped into the war with no time to feel out the ground.

The two combat teams approached each other, neither knowing the strength or position of the other, until their reconnaissance patrols of riflemen and machine-gunners met in the underbrush. There was a quick blaze of fire and the lines formed along three little hills and settled down to the business of fighting.

In the 116th, sharpshooters of Company K, from Chase City, Va., descendants of the King's Mountain men, picked off officers of the First, assisted by four sergeants. One of these, with a pair of field glasses, borrowed from an officer, concentrated on second lieutenants with theoretically frightful results.

First Saved By Bell

Just before the battle was ended by the time schedule, the First was completing a movement around the left flank of the 116th, a movement in which the First was saved by the bell. Had it completed the flanking maneuver it would have run into a full regiment supported by artillery, instead of the single battalion it thought was in its front.

With the First was a battalion of the Eleventh Field Artillery, a regiment which includes the Richmond Howitzers, a regiment with a long list of battles, and the Norfolk Battery, which repulsed the British under Admiral Cochrane at Craney Island in 1814.

In the Fifty-eighth Brigade, the Fifth Maryland defended Rensselaer Falls against the First Maryland, attacking from the direction of Ogdensburg. The maneuver ended soon after the regiments had established contact, each supported by a battalion of the 110th Field Artillery.

In addition to supplying combat engineers troops for the regimental combat teams of the division, the 121st Engineers, under Col. John W. Oehmann, District Building Inspector, continued its unremitting task of keeping roads and bridges in repair. A new water chlorinater, capable of pumping and purifying 50 gallons a minute from any pond or stream and storing it in three canvas tanks holding a total of 7,500 gallons, was set up by the regiment.

Moratorium Plan Would Aid Men Called to Colors by U. S.

War Department Asked That Courts Be Empowered to Defer Rent, Tax and Insurance Payments

By the Associated Press

A plan empowering the courts to order temporary deferment of rent, insurance and tax payments of men called into military service was submitted to the House Military Committee today by the War Department.

Almost identical with the World War Civil Rights Act, the legislation would tend to prevent immediate eviction of a man's family upon failure to pay the rent, but it would not cancel the obligation eventually to make that payment.

It would authorize the Veterans' Administration to guarantee payment of insurance premiums during the man's year of service, but he would have to dig up the money for the defaulted premiums within a year after he returned to civil life, if he desired to continue his policy.

It would permit the soldier to defer payment of property taxes until he got out of the Army, but he would have to pay the tax collector 6 per cent interest.

Officials explained informally how the program would operate. In the case of rent payments, this would happen:

When a man was called into service and his rent was not paid on the regular date, the property owner would go into court to collect his money. Normally, if it was found that the military training directly affected the ability of his wife to pay the rent, the court would order a maximum of three months delay in eviction, if the landlord chose that course. Or the court could "make any other order that may be just." But in any case, the man would be obligated to make the rent good upon completing military service.

Take the case of the insurance payments:

Upon being called to the colors, a man might face the prospect of defaulting on his premiums. He could apply to the Veterans' Administration for relief. The Adminstration could approve his claim and give the insurance company a certificate guaranteeing payment.

When the man was mustered out, he would have one year in which to catch up with the payments he missed. If he chose not to continue the policy the insurance company would be compelled to transfer its cash surrender value to the Government. Then the Veterans' Administration would turn back the amount of deferred premiums to the company and return the cash balance to the insured man.

In the case of taxes, they could be deferred upon request.

In most cases covered by the proposed legislation, the Government could deduct part of a man's military pay to help take care of the obligations back home.

The War Department said:

"It is the considered opinion of the department that the provisions of this bill do not prejudice the rights of individuals, partnerships, corporations or other business associations who may have any rights alleged to exist against a person in the military service. The bill merely prescribes that the determination of such alleged rights and proceedings thereunder shall be decided by courts of competent jurisdiction.

"The purpose of the bill is to free persons in the military service from harassment and injury to their civil rights during their term of military service."

Bill Would Let Morgenthau Call Back Coast Guard Officers

By the Associated Press

Chairman Bland, Democrat, Virginia, of the House Merchant Marine Committee proposed legislation yesterday to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to order retired Coast Guard officers to active duty in time of national emergency.

BLAND

Under existing law, the Coast Guard becomes a part of the Navy when war is declared. The Secretary of the Navy then is authorized to call retired Coast Guard officers to active duty. In time of peace, the Coast Guard operates under the Treasury.

The United States Housing Authority announced yesterday that President Roosevelt had approved loans and allocations of $13,773,000 to build 3,601 homes for families of defense workers in eight vital centers.

The loans totaling $6,548,000 were to four local housing authorities to construct 1,876 homes for families attached to three naval stations and one Army post. In addition, allocations totaling $7,225,000 were made to the War and Navy departments for construction of 1,725 homes at three other naval stations and an Army post.

Young men who take their best girls' hands and rush to the marriage license bureau to become husbands before Uncle Sam can draft them for military duty, have no assurance that they won't be called for a year's active training under terms of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill now before the Senate.

The measure contains no specific exemption for married men. They will be required to register for service, just as any other male citizen from 21 through 30 years of age, if it becomes law.

The President is authorized, however, to defer the training "of those men in a status with respect to persons dependent upon them for support which renders their deferment advisable." The measure contains no definition of "dependents."

A resolution which would have compelled the Administration to submit weekly reports to Congress on progress of the national defense program was tabled by voice vote in the House yesterday.

Majority Leader Rayburn, urging killing of the resolution, said it would "just consume valuable time for the benefit of idle curiosity seekers."

Legislation which would empower the President to requisition privately owned tools, machinery and other equipment that might be needed by the Nation's armed forces was introduced yesterday by Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama.

The measure provided the President should determine a fair value and if the owner was unwilling to accept this valuation he would be paid one-half the amount and be permitted to sue the Government for the balance.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, proposed yesterday that aliens of five years' residence be given six months to apply for citizenship, if eligible, or be deported.

He introduced legislation which would require that such aliens who have not filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen during the last seven years and do not do so within six months after enactment of the measure be arrested and deported on warrant by the Attorney General.

Some Guardists To Be Trained At Aberdeen, Md.

Intensive training with modern automatic weapons and mechanized equipment is being given a "specialist" group of the District National Guard, while the remainder of the District's troops engage in maneuvers in New York State.

The specialists, in training at the Army Ordnance School in Aberdeen, Md., are receiving instruction in the testing, maintenance and inspection of the new Garand rifle, artillery breech mechanisms, fire-control instruments, tanks and scout cars.

Meanwhile, the Guard announced that the 104th Ordnance Company was enroute yesterday to Rensselear Falls, N. Y., with a convoy of technical vehicles, including machine shops, welding shops, tank repair shops and automotive repair shops.

The company is scheduled to arrive in the maneuvering area at 5 p. m. tomorrow. It has been ordered to set up its bivouac under cover and begin repair of broken and unserviceable guns, tanks and other vital equipment.

Illinois Officials Quit Guard Posts

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—A circuit court judge and a Democratic State representative resigned from the Illinois National Guard tonight, a few hours after Attorney General John E. Cassidy held in a formal opinion that guard officers must automatically surrender their civil posts if called into Federal service.

The two, whose resignations were announced by Adjt. Gen. L. V. Regan, were Judge Robert J. Dunne, a lieutenant colonel in the guard, and Representative Pierce L. Shannon, a captain.

Fire at Navy Yard Just Burning Pants

Visions of sabotage raced through Washington minds last night as a large number of fire engines and police and the fire boat raced to the Navy Yard.

Eight fire engines, two trucks, a fire rescue squad ambulance, police cars and motorcycles and a harbor police boat turned up at the yard shortly before 8:30 p. m. to find that a sailor, true to the Navy tradition of neatness, had been pressing his own trousers but forgot to turn off the iron.

A burning ironing table in the "receiving ship," an old three-story building used as barracks, was extinguished before the firemen and police arrived.

To an ordinary alarm, only two engine companies and one truck respond, but this one came from the fire box at Eighth and M streets southeast, which is in a category all its own because of the nearby Navy Yard.

Rep. Sumners Asks Special Rule Today

Preferred Status Expected on Bill Giving District Seats in Congress

A special rule to expedite action on the Sumners' resolution calling for a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to grant national representation for the District was expected today at a meeting of the House Rules Committee.

Two subjects of national importance are before the committee—the child refugee and National Guard bills—but there is a likelihood time will be found to consider the request of Chairman Sumners of the Judiciary Committee for a rule that will give his resolution a preferred status on the House calendar.

Representative Sumners will go before the Rules Committee, accompanied by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee and Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee which more than 10 days ago favorably reported the national representation resolution.

House Minority Leader Martin, a stanch advocate of national representation for the District, expressed a hope the committee would not delay further action on the application for a special rule.

The Rules Committee is scheduled to meet at 10:30 a. m. From present indications there will be from five to seven absentees on the 14-man committee. Chairman Sabath, who has been out of town over the week-end, is due to return, but the others will be absent because of illness and business which has taken them back to their home districts.

In the absence of Chairman Sabath, the ranking majority member of the Rules Committee, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, said he had not been officially informed of the request of Sumners for a special rule but he added:

"If Representative Sumners appears before the committee," he declared, "we may find time to grant him a hearing."

Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery Thursday.

Mr. Neely served eight years in the Navy from 1918 to 1926, before joining the sales force of a lock firm. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Berenetta Neely; a stepson, Leonard Harris; and a stepbrother, David Kramer, of Elizabeth, N. J.

There must be a destitute sword-swallower in town from the indications of a robbery report received by police yesterday.

Southeast Businessmen Also Go on Record For Sumners Bill

The Southeast Business Men's Association last night urged the District to take action to provide "a prompt and adequate ambulance service" for the Capital.

Members approved the resolution after pointing to the case of William Greaves, 62-year-old engineer, of 3819 Twentieth street northeast, who died August 2 after he was allowed to lie in the street for an hour before an ambulance arrived at the scene of a traffic accident at Twenty-second and Quincy streets northeast.

The unit also went on record in favor of the Sumners bill for District representation in Congress. Members asked the Capital Transit Co. to see to it that employes on trolleys on Pennsylvania avenue southeast observe traffic regulations more closely.

Red Cross Plans Aid to Families Of D. C. Conscripts

Home service aid to families of conscripts where needed was discussed yesterday by the local Red Cross chapter.

Otto Lund, manager of the District chapter, said great demands upon the home service departments this winter are anticipated in the event compulsory military training is enacted by Congress.

He said the Red Cross may have to extend its assistance to families of service men.

Meanwhile, final plans were made at a meeting yesterday for enrollment of business firms' employes during the September 23-October 19 drive. David E. McCoy is general business chairman.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra Monday night in South Building Auditorium. Program: "Russian Easter Overture" (Rimski-Korsakov), "Irmelin" (Delius), "The Culprit Fay" (Hadley), Symphony in E minor (Brahms).

Breaking its precedent of summer silence, the Department of Agriculture Orchestra honored one of its members, Rudolph Hellbach, by playing a concert last evening in South Building auditorium, and will make the "token of esteem and affection" more emphatic by repeating the program tonight. Mr. Hellbach, a flautist, has been a member of the organization since its inception, and his imminent transfer to Philadelphia removes from the ranks an enthusiastic and indefatigable worker for the development of the group. His colleagues elected to say their farewells publicly in the pleasant fashion of music.

Walter Bauer introduced the departing musician to the audience and paid him a tribute for faithful service before turning to direct the opening piece on the program, Rimski-Korsakov's "Russian Easter Overture." In calling it an overture, the composer discounted its real value as a gorgeously colored tone-poem descriptive of the Byzantine elements in the Russian Orthodox Church and of the pagan reminiscences inherent in the Easter festival. Stravinski, a pupil of Rimski-Korsakov, may have had this overture in mind when he wrote its companion piece, "The Rites of Spring," which reverts to frank paganism.

Dr. Bauer, who can always be trusted to bring forward a rewarding novelty, unearthed for this occasion a charming prelude, "Irmelin," by Frederick Delius. This has an interesting story. When he was 28, Delius composed his first stage work, "Irmelin," which remained unperformed and unpublished. Forty years later, while he was suffering the infirmities of paralysis and blindness, he recalled some of the melodies of his early opera and wove them into a prelude which he dictated to his young pupil and amanuensis, Eric Fenby.

Impressionism in music was a French contribution, and in France Delius spent the major portion of his creative life, but his impressionism shows no Gallic influence whatever. It is a Nordic impressionism in which the flavor is Scandinavian, Scottish and English. "Irmelin" shows these characteristics in an enchanting lyricism of a haunting loveliness. Oddly enough, the Nordic atmosphere is enhanced by a subtle use of the old Lydian mode.

Dr. Bauer also revived one of Henry Hadley's most effective compositions, "The Culprit Fay," which dates from 1909. Among our American composers, Hadley was one eminent for versatility and electicism. The very facility of his writing prevented him from developing an individual style and obscured the very genuine poesy in his nature. "The Culprit Fay" shows a fanciful imagination akin to Mendelssohn's, and an instrumental skill close to that of Richard Strauss.

The second half of the program was devoted to the E minor symphony of Brahms, one of the great testaments of romanticism. It was performed by the orchestra with a fervor appropriate to its elegaic nobility.

Coroner's Inquest Scheduled Today In Traffic Death

A coroner's inquest will be held at 11:30 a. m. today into the death of Mrs. Verna Dove, 47, of 204 Tenth street southeast.

Mrs. Dove was struck by an automobile on August 3 in front of 301 Eleventh street southeast, according to police records. The police named John W. Lewis, 24, of 412 Eleventh street northeast, as the driver. He will appear at the inquest today.

Mrs. Dove died at Casualty Hospital at 8:05 a. m. yesterday. Her death brought to 44 Washington's traffic fatalities for the year, as against 52 at this time last year.

Mrs. Dove was the widow of Charles Dove, of Bergton, Va., and she is survived by the following children: Wade W. and Edna Dove, of Bergton; Lloyd Dove, of Strasburg, and Elvia Dove, of Singers Glen, Va.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday in the United Brethren Church at Criders, Va., with interment in the cemetery there.

Two Pickpockets Hunted in Theft Of Wallet, $580

Police last night were looking for a pair of pickpockets who relieved Joseph R. Tomlinson, 66, of 4313 Lee Highway, Arlington, Va., his billfold containing $580 in bills.

Tomlinson told police he was jostled by the two white men as he entered a restaurant at Eleventh and E streets northwest. One of the men, he said, dropped a pair of dark glasses and exclaimed to Tomlinson, "Don't step on them, please."

When Tomlinson was ready to pay his restaurant check he found his wallet missing. He said the $580 was mostly in $5, $10 and $20 bills.

The same two men were suspected of the theft of Robert P. Guillam's pocketbook containing $70 last night in a downtown theater. Guillam, who lives at the Ambassador Hotel, reported it was taken from his left hip pocket.

Byron Backs Proposed Pool In Bethesda

Committee Named After Conference In His Office

Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, pledged his support last night to the proposed municipal swimming pool in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area at a conference in his office.

On his suggestion a committee of residents from the Bethesda area were appointed to take charge of plans to obtain the estimated $60,000 to $75,000 pool. Heading the committee as chairman is Vincent Ahearn, 7324 Hampden lane, executive secretary of the National Sand and Gravel Association.

Other members appointed were S. Walter Bogley, sr., Dr. William F. Burdick, William Throckmorton and W. Prescott Allen, sponsor of the projected pool and publisher of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Tribune.

Attending the meeting also were two members of the Maryland division of the National Youth Administration, who expressed the hope that youths of the NYA might be employed on the project.

The two men, Carlton C. Schuller and Charles Opel, supervisor of the district which includes Montgomery County, produced plans of a $75,000 pool now under construction by NYA workers at Brunswick, Md., in Frederick County. Representing the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission at the conference was Lacey Shaw, one of the commissioners.

A delegation from the Silver Spring Community Center, headed by William F. Carlin, attended the meeting. Carlin said the center planned to back the movement with the hope that similar movements in Silver Spring would receive the support of the Bethesda group.

Suggestions advanced as a means of obtaining financial support for the pool included the floating of a bond issue and canvassing of local merchants for voluntary contributions. Neither motion received support and were discarded.

Hospital Aide Critically Hurt In Traffic Accident

John Gentry, 57, of 800 Portland street southeast, an attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital, was seriously injured last night when he allegedly walked into the side of an automobile at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Thomas Mattia, 24, of 608 Irving street northwest, the driver, said Gentry stepped from a safety zone and struck the side of his auto as he slowed down in order to halt his machine for a light changing from amber to red.

Gashed by the door handle of the car, the victim suffered a perforated stomach Emergency Hospital doctors reported.

Physician gave him slightly better than a 50-50 chance to live. They said the ambulance's speed in responding apparently had prevented an internal infection.

Walter Reed Employe Injured by Auto

Fred Carmon, 36, resident and employe of Walter Reed Hospital, suffered head and arm injuries and shock when struck by an automobile as he crossed Georgia avenue at Dahlia street northwest.

Police reported he stepped from the front of a Capital Transit repair truck, on the streetcar tracks, into the path of a car driven by Bowman F. Snow, 23, of 4701 Sixteenth street northwest. He was taken to Walter Reed Hospital.

Capital Walks Too Dirty, Says Expert

Sanitary Engineer Finds Street Clean; Urges Additional Trash Receptacles

Dr. George A. Soper, sanitary engineering expert who discovered "Typhoid Mary," famed source of New York typhoid epidemics in 1902, last night denounced the paradoxical situation of a National Capital with clean streets and filthy sidewalks.

SOPER

"What would you expect to be the cleanest sidewalk in the city?" the internationally known sanitation expert queried in an interview at The Post.

"The one in front of the White House," he declared, answering his own question. "and just look at it . . . it is constantly littered with all kinds of trash—peanuts, empty cigarette packs and chewing gum papers."

Softens Criticism

Dr. Soper, of New York, who was appointed by Housing Administrator Nathan Strauss a special consultant on slum and tenement sanitation last October, softened his criticism of the Capital street cleaning methods with a commendation of "noticeable improvement in the past six months. The streets are kept clean if the sidewalks are not," he said.

The sanitation specialist declared, however, that much remained to be done here to bring it up to the desired standard of cleanliness. This standard, he asserted, should be one which would "set an example for the rest of the country."

"You have thousands of tourists from all over America coming here every year. Why not give them an example to take home? You can't do it by having littered sidewalks."

Dr. Soper suggested as a means to improve the situation here a great increase in the number of street trash receptacles. These should be psychologically placed so a person wishing to dispose of trash would find one conspicuously nearby so that he would feel inclined to throw the trash in the basket rather than on the sidewalk.

The expert, who is a member of a special New York committee on street and outdoor cleanliness, said Washington compares unfavorably in cleanliness with the European cities whose sanitation methods he studied in seven tours of England and the Continent.

"In Paris, at least before the war, when you walked along the street you saw water constantly streaming along street gutters to carry away the trash street cleaners were always sweeping into it from sidewalks and the roadway."

Fined in Munich

Dr. Soper told of an incident in Munich, Germany, to illustrate how "thoughtless" persons who failed to drop trash in the street corner receptacles were dealt with.

Absent-mindedly, he dropped an envelope in the middle of an intersection, Dr. Soper said. Immediately a policeman scolded him, ordered him to pick up the paper, then fined him a mark as "warning."

"Here, too, thoughtless persons must be taught to keep the city scrupulously clean," he declared.

In her column, "My Day," on January 9, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt mildly reproached the Capital for its street cleaning methods.

"I wish," said the First Lady, "we might be the cleanest, the most orderly city in the world."

Soft-Drink and Cigar Stands in Government Buildings Help Blind Support Themselves

HORACE SEAMARK, Blind Clerk — RUTH THULES, Assistant Manager — DONALD HANKS, Manager

Snack stand in Treasury Department, one of 23 operated in Federal buildings under direction of Vocational Rehabilitation Service of the District

Maybe you've seen them—those soft drink and cigar stands in many of the Government buildings. Perhaps you even bought a stogie or a cheroot from the blind person who operates the stand.

If so, your purchase has helped to further a program of aiding sightless persons to secure employment being supervised by the Vocational Service for the Blind, a Government office in the Department of the Interior.

The first stand was established in 1936, in a now demolished temporary building belonging to the War Department. There are now 23 stands located in Federal buildings throughout the city, all under the close direction and management of the Vocational Rehabilitation Service of the District of Columbia.

One blind operator formerly made $4 a week making cane chairs to supplement his income from relief rolls. Today, no longer on relief, he makes a substantial income. As Joseph F. Clunk, supervisor of the Vocational Service for the Blind and a blind man himself, says, "Our main purpose is to help them secure employment and remove them from relief rolls."

Financial support is supplied by the Washington Society for the Blind. Federal legislation to permit use of the buildings was passed in 1936, and in 1937 the service was established.

The enterprise was started with a borrowed $15,000. All proceeds are put back into a fund to establish additional stands. There are now 27 blind persons engaged in operating the stands and plans are being made to establish two more. Goal of the vocational service is 50 stands.

Abrams Takes Split Verdict Over Cocoa Kid

5,043 See Close Bout At Stadium

Harry Hurst Gets T.K.O. Over Gilley In Semifinal Bout; $6,554 Is Gate

By Tony Neri.

George Abrams, Washington's fourth ranking middleweight of the world, took a split ten-round decision from Kid Cocoa, No. 1 welterweight contender from Puerto Rico, last night at Griffith Stadium before 5,043 fans. The victory was the first scored by a white fighter over a colored opponent since the inauguration of mixed bouts here.

The verdict was received with mixed boos and cheers. It was the first defeat for the Puerto Rican in 47 straight fights. The battle was close all the way.

The gate was $6,554.

Cocoa Kid weighed 149½ and Abrams came in at 158 pounds, which caused a mild surprise at the ringside.

The Washington boy had the best of the fighting in the early rounds, but in the fifth, sixth and seventh it was mostly Cocoa. Abrams rallied in the last three rounds and appeared the stronger at the end. The fight could have gone either way.

Abrams Gains Edge

In the first round, after feeling each other out the best part of the round, Abrams seemed to have a slight edge in the late fighting.

In the second round the referee warned Cocoa of a couple of low blows. Abrams took the fight to the Puerto Rican, but the colored boy retaliated with short lefts and and rights.

George continued to take the fight to Cocoa and peppered the colored boy with short jabs. Cocoa had the best of the in-fighting.

In the fourth the Kid landed lefts and rights to Georgie's midsection and Georgie had trouble getting to Cocoa.

Again in the fifth the Puerto Rican landed low blows. Abrams was on the catching ends of a couple of hard right smashes. Georgie rushed the colored boy as the bell ended the round.

Cocoa kept jabbing Abrams with his left in the sixth and connected with a hard right as the Washington boy missed with his left. Abrams missed again and then the fighters stood toe-to-toe swinging. Abrams sustained a cut eye in the scrimmage in midring. Cocoa was now carrying the fight to George.

Hurst Scores Over Gilley

In the seventh round, Cocoa Kid again cracked Abrams' eye and it began to bleed. George rallied with sharp lefts and rights. The round ended with the boys in the center of the ring.

Between rounds, Manager Chris Dundee worked on Abrams' eye.

Abrams tied up the Puerto Rican in the early fighting in the eighth, George connected with two rights, one to the chin and the other to the body. Cocoa and Abrams were in a clinch as the round ended.

Abrams rushed from his corner and carried the fight to the welterweight in the ninth round. Cocoa caught Abrams with a straight left in the mouth and George went into Indianapolis, Aug. 12 (AP).—Johnny (No Hit) Vandermeer almost did it again tonight.

The win was Johnny's fifth since he was shipped to the Tribe against one loss.

Conn Still Favored Over Pastor Tonight

Odds Drop Sharply, However, on Eve of Fight Tonight; D. C. Slated to Get Louis Title Bout if New Yorker Wins

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 12.—With a September shot at Joe Louis as the somewhat painful reward, Billy Conn and Bob Pastor fight it out in the Polo Grounds at 9 p. m. (E. S. T.), tomorrow in a battle bringing together the two best boxers among the "big" fellows in the ring today.

As a fight, it figures to be the classiest exhibition of ring science since Tommy Loughran and Jimmy Slattery waged their 15-round duel 13 years ago, but the cash customers aren't taking to it. Most optimistic estimates are that 20,000 will contribute to a gross gate of $50,000.

Conn is Favorite

Although Pastor went 11 rounds with Louis before the bomber's depth charges exploded on him, the betting fraternity has made the light-heavyweight champion from Pittsburgh the favorite. The odds, however, have nose-dived steadily, and Billy the Kid probably won't go into the ring at better than 5 to 6, with even money a possibility.

[In the event Pastor defeats Conn, the New York heavyweight will meet Louis in a proposed title fight at Griffith Stadium in September, according to officials of the Variety Club.]

I like Conn to win over the full 15-round derby distance, but by a margin as close as the American League pennant race. Although he'll be lucky to weigh 175, compared to the 182 pounds Pastor expects to pack, the Pittsburgh pretty boy is punching better than he ever has before. And, while Pastor has the experience against heavyweights which Billy lacks, Conn has been taking on speed.

This will be the fifty-eighth bout of Conn's skyrocket career, which boomed him in five years from the

Generous Chisox Toss Off $7,000, Giving Fans Break

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 12.—The rain that spoiled Saturday's scheduled double-header with the Detroit Tigers will cost the Chicago White Sox approximately $7,000.

The two teams played five innings of the first game between showers, making the contest legal, before rain prevented further competition. Thus the 17,000 fans present were entitled to no refunds nor did their rain checks have any value.

As a good will gesture to the disappointed crowd, however, club officials announced the rain checks would be honored at any future game of the White Sox. Since the contest was legal Detroit received its usual share of the receipts.

For each ticket presented at a future game the White Sox must pay the visiting club's portion as well as the Government tax, and the league's share. Club officials estimated this would amount to about $7,000 if all the rain checks are used.

Young Star Allows Seven Hits as Mates Slug Rival Pitchers; 3 Homers Clouted

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—The supposedly weak-batting Cleveland Indians blasted 12 hits, including three home runs, today to beat the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 5, and break their first-place deadlock.

Bob Feller pitched his twentieth victory as he limited the heavy-hitting Bengals to seven safe blows before 23,720. Hal Newhouser, the Detroit starter, was routed in the first inning and was charged with the defeat.

Feller, the first hurler in the majors to reach the 20-game mark, fanned seven Tigers and was in serious trouble in only one inning—the seventh when he walked three men in a row. Barney McCosky doubled in two runs and another Bengal scored on an infield out. Feller ended the inning by fanning Rudy York.

Trosky Hits His 21st

Hal Trosky poled his twenty-first homer in the first inning with one runner on and Beau Bell followed with his third circuit smash of the year. In the fifth Roy Weatherly drove his fifth round-tripper over the right field wall.

Clay Smith was called in after Cleveland's three run outburst in the first inning and he gave up eight hits and five runs. Tom Seats and Freddy Hutchinson finished for the losers.

Ken Keltner's single and Ray Mack's double plated the fourth run for Cleveland in the fourth. Weatherly's homer the next inning was followed on another tally on Lou Boudreau's single and Bell's double. The Redskins wound up run-making in the sixth on Ben Chapman's single, his theft of second and Boudreau's single.

Detroit scored one in the second on a single by York and Pinky Higgins' two-base blow and another in the sixth on Hank Greenberg's double and a single by Higgins.

Chapman Paces Attack

Feller, who has lost six games, ran his strikeout total for the year to 197. It was Newhouser's ninth defeat against eight triumphs.

The crowd was one of the largest week-day gatherings here in recent years. All reserved seats were sold two hours before game time and the scattered vacant seats were in the bleachers and upper stands.

Manager Oscar Vitt, who has remained in the dugout most of the time since the players "protest" early in the season, went to the first base coaching line. He nominated the veteran Mel Harder for the second and final game of the crucial series tomorrow. Johnny Corsica was due for Detroit.

A's $65,000 McCoy, Flopping, Is Benched

Hailed as Player to Revitalize Mackmen, Bows Out to a Rookie

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 12. — Benny McCoy, the Philadelphia Athletics' $65,000 second baseman, was benched indefinitely today in an infield shakeup Connie Mack hopes will lift the A's from the American league cellar.

Mack replaced the 22-year-old infielder from Grandville, Mich., with Larry Davis, a rookie graduated from Duke University in 1939.

Seven months ago, McCoy was so promising that the Athletic's 77-year-old president and manager paid him $45,000 for his signature on a two-year contract—salary $10,000 annually. Nine other major league teams had bid for his services after Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis declared him a free agent.

The price was the highest ever paid for a free agent and the highest for an A's player since Connie Mack obtained Lefty Grove from Baltimore 15 years ago for $100,600.

But Benny failed to live up to his advance notices as the boy who would revitalize the Athletics. Last year, in 55 games with the Detroit Tigers, he hit .302 and his fielding was a sensation.

In 372 times at bat for the A's, however, McCoy has hit only 96 times for an average of .258. A month ago he was even worse, with .248, and on June 8 his average was .279.

Mack said his high-priced recruit's fielding hasn't been up to standard, either. At this late date in the season the Athletics have the worst fielding record in the league.

Connie also rearranged his infield to place centerfielder Fred Chapman at shortstop in place of Al Brancato and Joe Gantenbein at third in place of Al Rubeling.

Dodger Sale Deal at Standstill

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—George V. McLaughlin, president of the Brooklyn Trust Co., which holds 50 per cent of the Brooklyn Dodgers in trust for the Charles H. Ebbets' heirs, said today no progress had been made in the sale of the club to a syndicate headed by Mike Jacobs.

McLaughlin said the company had only one interview with Jacobs and that about a month ago.

"The company is prepared to discuss with any responsible person the sale of the stock of the Brooklyn Baseball Club which it holds with the express understanding the names of the principals must be disclosed and must be acceptable to the baseball authorities," McLaughlin said.

He said the trust company holds no stock but had advanced the club money so it could "continue its normal operations at a time when the club could not procure money through normal banking channels and when the other stockholding interests were either unwilling or unable to contribute their share."

Washington Fighter Scores in Role of Favorite

Triple Dead Heat For Place Money At Thistle Down

By International News Service

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—A triple dead heat for second, almost unprecedented on the American turf, took place today in the fifth race at Thistle Down race track.

Tied for place position, behind the winner, Indian Penny, piloted by Jockey Chestnut, were Kantaka, Present Time and Wilda H.

Kantaka paid $2.40 for both place and show. Present Time returned $3.60 for place and $4.40 for show, while Wilda H. paid $4.60 and $4.

The winner, timed in 1:12 1/5 for three-quarters of a mile, returned $10.20, $3.60 and $3.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 12.—At least one American football foundry is worried these days over the way the national defense program is rearing its grim head into the college grid business. J. C. "Mose" Sims, the razzle-dazzle athletic director of St. Mary's of Texas, has petitioned his Congressman to use his good offices to have National Guardsmen who are college students exempted from the kind of service which now faces Guardsmen.

CONSIDINE

St. Mary's, like many other schools where the football team looms a lot more importantly than the school's other departments, such as learning, probably has more than its share of National Guardsmen. Sims is all in favor of national defense and, if asked to, would seize the family blunderbus and shoot buckshot outdrops at any foreign invader. But when the Government starts thinking about stationing his best halfback in Panama, on the eve of St. Mary's bur hops northward, enough's enough.

Sims made his request to Congress "in the interest of a good sports program which will serve to balance the American public in general." He added that unless such Guardsmen are exempted, and are called for the one-year training period, "in many cases collegiate football teams would be wrecked, with the loss of many outstanding players, and basketball, baseball, track and other sports would suffer." He suggests that colleges put in a four-year R. O. T. C. course and make it compulsory.

Otherwise, he threatens, by inference, American colleges may be forced to give the game back to the students.

We don't want to discourage Bob Pastor any more than is necessary, but it now develops that Washington, D. C., isn't as grateful for the promise of a Louis-Pastor fight (if Bob beats Conn tomorrow night) as Mike Jacobs expected it would be. Fact is, it prefers a Zale-Overlin or a Jeffra-Scalzo match to the third bout of the Louis-Pastor series. The press reception to Mike's gesture of offering to promote a Louis-Pastor fight in the Capital was bleak. The boys said, "Well, now, that's real sporting of him, isn't it?" and other harsh things. The fight would be for the benefit of the Variety Club, which does a lot of fine charitable work, but the boys can't see where another Louis-Pastor fight would come under the heading of variety.

Speaking of boxing, here's a note from Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, president of the National Boxing Association:

"Anent your column: I have never heard any NBA official, personally or officially, speak of Mike Jacobs without lauding him as a promoter and showman. The NBA always has contended that Jacobs rightfully should land the biggest and best matches.

"We differ with him and will forcefully continue to do so in the premise of tying up top flight contestants so that other promoters cannot bid for their services even if they could interest the managers and fighters concerned.

"The NBA contention is proven by the fact that Louis will not be able to box in Washington, if he does, without Jacobs' consent. That throttles independent promoters and does boxing nationally no good. The NBA must look at boxing from a national viewpoint, and naturally Mike does not do that.

"As you state, if Mike is okayed to promote a bout here (it is against D. C. Boxing Commission rules for an out-of-town promoter to work there) he'll get every cooperation from me. The NBA and all in it have a high regard for him, and differ with him only as mentioned above."

Not since that famous map company came out with a brilliant new map of Europe, on the eve of Hitler's invasion of the Low Countries, has there been an unhappier misadventure in the published word than the case of the firm which flooded Brooklyn with handsome silver and blue placards not long ago, on which was this legend:

DON'T WORRY! WE'VE GOT MEDWICK.

We got our notice to stop worrying the day Ducky was benched for incompetence. Duck came to the Dodgers hitting .304 and has dropped to .282 in his fever to live up to a skill which probably deserted him for keeps two or three years ago. By a devilish coincidence Ernie Koy, who was tossed into the Medwick deal as unconcernedly as the jeweler tosses in a box with the ring you buy, has jumped to .312. The regrettable fact is that now at least Koy would be desirable in an even-up trade, though Medwick brought $150,000 to Koy's zero.

It is not the first such case. Lyn Lary, who was tossed into the Washington roster in 1933 in the deal that sent Joe Cronin to Boston for a quarter of a million dollars, was a better shortstop through most of that year than was Cronin, who was bothered not only by a slowly healing wrist, but also by the thing that now torments Medwick—an overly active zeal to make good. Cronin, booed even worse in Boston than Medwick has been booed in Brooklyn, came back and played good ball—and Lary was forgotten. Perhaps that will be the way things turn out in the Medwick-Koy case. We hope so, but doubt it. Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon would sell their brothers a tubercular cow. If Medwick gets hot again it will be an upset of such proportions that it will induce those artful St. Louis horse traders to jump the price on the next fabulous relic they unload.

Mrs. Andrus Upset Victim In Tennis Play

Former Champion Is Defeated, 6—2, 6—4, By Virginia Ellis

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 12.—Opening day form suffered only a single break today as the Essex County Club's sixteenth annual Women's Invitation tennis tournament moved through its first and second rounds.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., ranked fourteenth nationally and tournament champion in 1938, was the lone casualty, losing in the first round to Virginia Ellis, of Harvard, Mass., 6—2, 6—4. Miss Ellis, a former New England champion, was eliminated in the second round by Barbara Bradley, of Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—1.

Fourth-seeded Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, worked hard to defeat the stubborn Barbara Neilds, of Rye, N. Y., 8—1, 6—0, and then fought an uphill three-setter to beat Mrs. John Van Ryn, Austin, Tex., 4—6, 9—6, 6—1.

Three other seeded stars drew byes and then won easy second-round matches. They were Helen Jacobs, of Los Angeles, seeded second, who defeated Mrs. Philip Theopold, Dedham, 6—1, 6—1; Sarah Palfrey, of Reno, Nev., seeded third, who beat Molly Poole, Manchester, 6—0, 6—0, and Valerie Scott, England, seeded second on the foreign list, who downed Molly Van Wyk, of Essex, 6—1, 6—0.

Mary Hardwick, of England, top-foreign seed, reached the second round by defeating Emily Lincoln, Brookline, 6—4, 6—4.

Aron and Kaplan Battle to a Draw

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—Milt Aron, of Chicago, and Mike Kaplan, of Boston, two leading contenders for Henry Armstrong's welterweight championship fought to a 10-round draw here tonight. Aron weighed 150, Kaplan 147.

A crowd of 4,000 stood around the ring at the finish yelling disapproval of the decision. The two judges disagreed and the referee called it a draw.

Aron, rated the number one challenger for Armstrong's title, was knocked down in the first round, but bounced up at the count of two. He rallied to floor Kaplan in the sixth but Kaplan recovered without a count.

Buck Walters Is Victim in 4-to-2 Loss

Pittsburgh Hangs Up 11th Victory in Last 12 Games, Pulling Close to Third Place

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 12.—The rampaging Pittsburgh Pirates continued their hot pace tonight by beating the Cincinnati Reds and Bucky Walters, 4 to 2, before a wild crowd of 42,254 fans that overflowed into the outfield. It was their eleventh triumph in 12 games and moved them to within a game and a half of the third-place New York Giants.

Big Max Butcher had the Reds eating out of his hands peacefully except for the sixth frame when they bunched three hits after two were out to score a run and the ninth, when Ernie Lombardi knocked a home run.

The game-deciding break came in the seventh when Elbie Fletcher's long fly fell into the rightfield crowd for a ground rule double. After Maurice Van Robays skied out, Frankie Gustine, sensational young rookie second baseman, sent Fletcher home with a single and moved to second on the throw to the plate.

Senor Al Lopez, the sparkplug in the sudden Pirate spurt of the past month, then singled Gustine home. Lopez had scored the first Buc run in the sixth, which he opened with a single, moved to second on Butcher's single and counted on Paul Waner's hit.

Van Robays Scores

The fourth Pirate run was a result of Walters poor control. He hit Deb Garms and walked Fletcher. Van Robays scored Garms with a sharp single.

The Reds scored first in the sixth. Linus Frey doubled into the crowd and counted on Frank McCormick's single.

Snead Weds His Schoolday Sweetheart

Ten-Year Romance Ends in Marriage; Couple Leave for Canada

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 12.—Samuel Jackson Snead, long-hitting Virginia golf pro now located at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa., came home tonight to wed Audrey Elizabeth Karnes, his "girl" since boyhood.

SNEAD

Their 10 years' romance led to a simple ceremony in the Hot Springs Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p. m. with the Rev. George W. Oldham, the pastor, officiating.

Mrs. Oldham and Nelson Long, Hot Springs pro and an old friend of Snead, and Mrs. Long were the only witnesses.

Snead, now 28, and his 24-year-old bride wearing a misty blue traveling costume with harmonizing accessories, left immediately after the ceremony for Washington and hoped to make Toronto tomorrow night so that Sammy could be on hand to compete in a tournament there Wednesday.

Mrs. Snead has been employed at the Homestead Hotel here. Her parents are dead.

Snead set a record for winnings for one year in tournaments sponsored by the Professional Golfers' Association when he collected more than $10,000 in 1938.

He started on his golf career as a 15-year-old caddy here, and picked up the game without the benefit of formal instruction.

Former Assistant Golf Pro Wins Hole-in-One Play

Bayside, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP).—Harry Rohrs, a former assistant golf pro, made the best shot of the 915 fired by 183 Long Island golfers today in the New York World-Telegram hole-in-one tournament. His best effort stopped 2 feet 1½ inches from the pin.

Rohrs replaced Fritz Reimers, of Omaha, former Cornell captain, as Long Island leader. Reimers' best shot Sunday was 2 feet 3 inches. That still was good for second place with his 2-foot 7-inch shot holding third.

Leaders for the entire tournament, conducted in three divisions, are the 11-inch shots made in Westchester by Mrs. J. J. Lawlor and Howard Schanzer, and a 14-incher hit by Ralph M. Watt in the New Jersey division.

Waterfowl Season Extended 15 Days

Dates and Regulations Are Changed for Fall Shooting by Secretary Ickes; Duck Population Increase Causes Change

By the Associated Press

Hunters of migratory waterfowl will have 60 days of hunting this fall instead of 45 as last year and can begin shooting at sunrise instead of having to wait until 7 a. m.

Secretry Ickes issued the new regulations today governing the hunting of ducks, geese, coots and jacksnipe but provided a shorter season on woodcocks and reduced the bag limits on geese, mourning doves and whitewing doves.

The hunting season in the Northern zone will be from October 1 to November 29; in the intermediate zone from October 16 to December 14, and in the Southern zone from November 2 to December 31, inclusive.

The secretary said that an increase for five consecutive years in the duck population made it possible to liberalize the hunting rules but added that "we cannot yet be sure that the day of stringent regulations is past."

"Our policy," Ickes said, "is to keep the annual kill below the annual production until the carrying capacity of the winter feeding ground has been reached. Favorable conditions this year make it possible to provide more hunting but it will again be necessary to invoke tight restrictions if future years are not as favorable."

Closed season was continued on wood ducks, Ross' geese and swans, and no open season was provided for snow geese and brants in the Atlantic States. The woodcock season was cut from 30 days to 15 but they may be taken from sunrise to sunset. The bag limit on doves was reduced from 15 to 12. The Secretary said cold weather in the South last winter and over-shooting in some areas made this action essential.

Boston, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox management announced tonight the purchase of Bill Fleming, right-handed pitcher and strikeout king from the Pacific Coast League, from Hollywood, Calif. Fleming will report to the Red Sox within a week.

The Red Sox gave an unannounced sum and sent Pitcher Alex Mustaikis, recently recalled from Scranton, to Hollywood in exchange. Another pitcher, to be chosen at the close of the season, will be sent to Hollywood to complete the deal.

Filchock Out, Flaherty Seeks Georgia Star

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 12.—Obviously concerned over failure of Frank Filchock, star quarterback, passing and running, to report to the Redskins camp today, Coach Ray Flaherty expressed fervent hope that Bill Hartman, 1938 standout in the "Skins" backfield, would accept the offer to play with the club this fall.

Filchock, who has remained in Fulton, Ky., with the town's Kitty League baseball club, was scheduled to appear in camp this morning ready to reach a compromise with the Redskin management on his demands for a larger salary check.

Flaherty admitted in tight-lipped fashion, however, that he had no idea where Filchock is or what his plans for the coming season are. Attempts of General Manager Jack Espey to reach Filchock yesterday were fruitless. Faced with a loss of much power and speed in a backfield minus Filchock, Flaherty Saturday opened negotiations with Hartman, now backfield coach at his alma mater, the University of Georgia, for the former Redskin back's return. Flaherty expects an answer from the Georgian within the next three days meanwhile, the Redskins coach exhibited a neat change of pace at noon today in a brief speech to Spokane and Seattle fans at a luncheon honoring the Seattle baseball club by stating he expects a vastly improved team this fall.

The Redskin coach postponed rough work another day, however, because of the large amount of minor aches and pains and turned over the squad to photographers for the day. Scrimmages start tomorrow.

Indian Spring Team Posts Best-Ball 64 At Rolling Road Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent

Catonsville, Md., Aug. 12.—A Washington team shared a three-way tie for first in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament here today at Rolling Road as the Indian Spring duo of Professional Mel Shorey and Amateur R. O. O'Malley played perfect partners for a best ball, 64.

They were tied by two Baltimore duos, the Suburban Club team of Ralph Beach and Nathan Kaufman and Frank Invernizzi, Hillsdale pro, and Charles Bauer, a Rolling Road amateur, all with handicap best ball, 64's.

Hugh McClellan, the Scot pro at the Edgewood Arsenal Club, near Baltimore, had the pro sweepstakes apparently locked up as he played the first nine in five-under-par 30, a new course record, but he slipped to 38 on the return trip and Charles Betschler, the Hillendale mentor, finished with a 68 to tie. Ralph Beach won the second pro sweeps prize with a one-under-par 69.

Five teams tied with 65s, the second lowest best ball scores. Leo Fraser, veteran of many national tournaments who is now manager of the host club, brought two partners into the second-place bracket, Spencer Overton, the Middle Atlantic champion, and George Grim. Fraser and Overton's round was a 65 without any handicap strokes. Another host club team of Pro Alec Taylor and Erford Barnes shared the runner-up spot with Beach and another partner, Arnold Litman, of Suburban, and McClellan and Bobby Jones, Hillendale, the only one of his partners that gave him much help.

Two District professionals, Shorey and Cliff Spencer, East Potomac, were each a shot out of the pro sweeps money although they matched par figures with 70. However, the course played easy, as it was dry and the ball rolled great distances and in addition winter rules made it easier. However, Leo Walper and George Diffenbaugh returned no cards.

O'Malley, a seven handicap player, was allowed four strokes and in addition to the gratis shots he helped Shorey with birdies on the seventh and ninth holes and another where he parred the hole when Mel missed.

A report on the tournament would not be complete without mention of a shot by Gene Larkin, that will go down in the writer's book as the greatest he has ever witnessed.

On the par four fourteenth hole, 381 yards, a barn where the tractors and tools are stored borders the fairway to the left. Larkin hooked his tee shot back of the barn and it hit one of the boarded windows with a bang. He went down to the ball and found it back of the barn, under a tree, with what looked like an impossible shot to the green. He couldn't see anything but sky from this location and had less than a square foot of clear space. However, he drew a four-iron from his bag and knocked the ball on the green, 10 feet from the cup, with a perfect hook. Without exaggeration, it was one shot in 10,000.

Scores of the Washingtonians

Greyhound Captures Fifth Straight Trot

Famous Horse Scores Easy Victory in $2,500 Event as Goshen Opens 'Hambletonian Week;' Baker Entry Is Barred From Mutuels

By the Associated Press

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 12.—"Hambletonian Week" on the grand circuit got under way today with another easy victory for E. J. Baker's great trotter, Greyhound, which won the richest of all harness racing events back in 1935.

Now eight years old, Greyhound returned to competition this year after appearing only in exhibitions the past two seasons, and his victory in the $2,500 first division trotting club stake was his fifth straight in this series of events. A crowd of about 5,000, the largest opening-day gathering in the history of Good Time Park, was on hand to see the big grey win in straight heats.

Greyhound was so much better than the small field that opposed him that he and his stablemate, Sister Mary, were barred from the mutuel betting. He trotted the two heats in 2:03½ and 2:02½. Sister Mary was second each time and Athlone Flaxey Guy, third.

Blackhawk, the favorite owned by Mahlon N. Haines and Parker Mitchell, of York, Pa., won the $1,000 Langhorne stake for two-year-old pacers after losing the first heat. Driven by Delvin Miller, Blackhawk won the last two heats in ordinary times. The filly Royal Lady II, from Vic Fleming's stable, took the first heat in 2:05½, the fastest time made by a juvenile pacer this season.

The track, which had been very slow during the past week, was much improved today but the general opinion of horsemen was that the Hambletonian record of 2:01¼ will not be in danger when the rich stake is run off Wednesday. Final entries for the Hambletonian are due at 11 o'clock (E. D. T.) tomorrow and indications are that the field may number ten, giving the stake a gross value of approximately $44,000.

6,000 Watch Nats Defeat Trenton, 8-3

Special Dispatch to The Post

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 12.—Before 6,000 spectators, largest crowd ever to witness a baseball game here, Washington mauled a brace of pitchers for 15 hits and an 8-3 victory over the Trenton Senators tonight in an exhibition engagement.

Spurting into a 8-0 lead against Goose Goslin's outfit, the Nats coasted behind the pitching of Joe Haynes, who weakened in the sixth to allow Trenton all of its runs, and Rene Monteagudo, who replaced Haynes starting the seventh. Haynes and Monteagudo scattered 11 hits.

Making his first start since July 4, Haynes checked Trenton with four hits in the first five innings, and was nicked for three singles and a double in the sixth.

The Nationals produced four runs in the second inning on five singles and a double by George Case, added two more runs in the third and two more in the sixth. Buddy Lewis, Cecil Travis, Charley Gelbert and Jimmy Pofahl each collected three hits for Washington.

Case, a native of Trenton, was honored in pre-game ceremonies, being presented with everything from a loving cup to a membership in a yacht club. Joe Krakauskas, Johnny Welaj and Monteagudo, former Trenton players, also were presented gifts.

Farley-Yankee Deal Awaits Season's Close

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley will not take over the Yankees until after the close of the season.

"There are many things to be ironed out," said Farley yesterday at the Yankee Stadium where he watched the world champions whip the Athletics. Farley said he planned a tour of the club's minor league holdings before the season ends.

Veteran Pearson Is Arm Weary, but Doc Is Not Worried

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Au. 12.—Monte Pearson, pitcher for the New York Yankees, is in Union Memorial Hospital with a sore shoulder and pitching arm, but his physician sees no reason why he shouldn't go back to mound duty after proper treatment.

"He's in the hospital wholly on the basis of a sore shoulder and pitching arm," said Dr. Sidney Miller. "He hurt his arm pitching around the first of July, and kept going. That's what caused the trouble."

He said Pearson, who entered the hospital a week ago, worked out today and that after an examination tomorrow he would be better able to estimate how long the right-handed hurler would be kept here.

Dr. Miller said it shouldn't be "over a week," but that Pearson probably would have to guard against over-exertion for awhile after leaving the hospital.

Jimmy Webb's Double Scores Bob Kennedy; Sox Leave 17 on Base

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 12.—Jimmy Webb's double after Bob Kennedy walked and Clint Brown sacrificed him to second gave the Chicago White Sox a hard-earned 6 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Browns tonight as the victors left 17 men stranded on the bases, one short of the league record.

Record Small Track Season Passes Half-Way Mark Today

Roman Boy In Debut at Cumberland

Ace Sprinter Seen Choice in Feature; Marlboro to Open Week From Today

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

The biggest season in the history of Maryland's smaller tracks passes the half-way mark today as the concluding week of racing at Cumberland begins. Since the opening of Hagerstown, through Bel Air and the first week of the sport in west Maryland, wagering each day has surpassed the corresponding day of last year. Attendance has kept in step with the betting. All three of the Free State tracks have set records this summer.

Modern betting facilities, better horses and improved business conditions have served to stimulate racing all around the circuit. Officials of Maryland's major tracks, frequent visitors to the minor ovals this summer, are predicting that the era of prosperity will be carried over to the big-time with the start of Havre de Grace in mid-September.

Marlboro Is Next

Following Cumberland, there are only two stops in the Maryland fair circuit. A week from today, the horses move right into Washington's lap at Marlboro. While Marlboro has been left behind as the other courses have gone in for larger stands and clubhouses, it will offer the totalizator betting the electric starting gate and the photo-finish camera.

Despite the fact that the fans will be forced to roam the hill by the water tower to get a glimpse of the action, Marlboro should go right ahead to keep up the record season.

Although racing at Cumberland always enjoys a carnival spirit, the second week of the meeting provides enough flourishes to make it unique in racing circles. While the horses are doing their stuff, the fair will be in progress. There's a quarter-mile midway with rides, stands, pink lemonade and sawdust. At night there will be fireworks.

Feature Promising

Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan, successful in lining up good programs throughout the season, has another fine card for today. In fact, the fifth and feature race would not be frowned at by Pimlico or Laurel. The sprint of 6½ furlongs has drawn horses which could and have held their own on major courses.

The probable favorite is Roman Boy. He has returned to the smaller tracks because his owner prefers to race him near his home. Roman Boy recently turned back excellent company in New York. Double Back, frequent winner on the milers; Pirate Ship, winner at Hialeah Park last winter; Irish Moon, prominent campaigner, and six others have been named for the test.

Betty's Bobby Wins At Washington

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Betty's Bobby and Steel Heels won the best two races run before a ladies' day crowd of 9,000 at Washington Park today.

Betty's Bobby, owned by the H. & H. Stock Farm, of Texas, whipped Predicate by half a length in the Midway Purse, a mile gallop for 3-year-olds. The only filly, Cutter, was third. The winner paid $4.60 and the time was 1:38 1-5.

J. W. Bell's Steel Heels beat the favored Busy Morn by a length and a half in the mile Burr Oak Purse for older horses. Sky Ball, 35-to-1 shot, finished third. Steel Heels paid $14.20 and ran the distance in 1:39 1-5.

Selections at Cumberland

Dear Al:

The Battle of Cumberland — John Racefan vs. Kid Tote—will be resumed today after an off afternoon on which the regulars tried to catch up on their knitting, tanning, sitting and fanning. So they should be in fine shape for the second half of the meeting. Want to take off four pounds in a hurry? One of the jockeys did it this way last week. He ran around the track four times and then sat for a half hour in an auto with the windows closed. About 11 a. m. in this weather, a closed auto makes a perfect steam box. From the top of the mountain in the backstretch, the Cumberland track looks like a Life Saver. Palmer Heagerty, of the pressbox crew, and I are running a dead heat as to weight. Coming from the track the other day Palmer and I were sitting in the front of the car. A wisecracker said, "If you guys get any fatter you're going to get arrested for having too many persons in the front seat." How about you horsemen giving Jockey D. West a chance? He can't be half as bad as some of those performances I saw others give last week. Is he too honest for you fellows? A friend of mine from the West Coast writes that Louis B. Mayer intends to win the 1941 Kentucky Derby. The movie man has put a wad of coin into the game and deserves that kind of a break. He has a top trainer, too, in Clyde Van Dusen. Most of us remember the horse named for him. Mayer has a colt, The Gob, which cost him $8,300 at the Saratoga sales last year. Son of Hard Tack, the papa of Seabiscuit. Turned in time of 1.10 3-5 for 6 furlongs on the coast. Wednesday night will be track night at the Careyville Inn, favorite night spot of the Cumberland race crowd. Special music and the dance floor will be opened. The jockeys are expected to cut some rugs. Jockey Willie Kelly continues to set the pace in the battle for riding honors here with a gold wrist watch at stake. Buddy Root is close on his heels. There is no truth in the rumor that Chief Evergreen has distemper, but he's still a dog. Peg Hanna bought him from me so he could get a badge to the meeting. See you at the rail.

BILL.

First race—Rippling On, practically left at the post, won last out. With better luck at the start, this one should make it two in a row. Pop's Sister is the one to beat. This filly showed only a flash of her true form in winning recently. Glitter Girl for the show end.

Second race—Arboreal appears best suited in this rather open affair. Gets in light and I'm going to string along. Polly Fair may prove a surprise. Had a lot of trouble in a Hagerstown outing. Chide has speed and is dangerous.

Third race—War Port was the victim of some poor counting on the part of the rider here last Friday. Likes this short course and needs only the right handling. Champfleury was second to War Port when they both ran out and will be a threat. Star On for the minor award.

Fourth race—Miss Maker probably isn't as good as she once was, but she gets in this with a feather assignment. May score at liberal odds. Cats Cradle is fit as hands make horses. Lena Girl should get a portion of the pay-off money.

Fifth race—Double Back has done about everything asked around the minor tracks. Martinez will do the riding and I believe the pair will get home in front. Roman Boy was a winner at New York but may have trouble with the sharp turns. Pirate Ship's last was impressive.

Sixth race—Dohoev won easily in that recent test and is the logical choice in this distance affair. Good Battle was the winner under a well-judged ride last Friday and is dangerous. Anya should go well.

Seventh race—Channing, winner if two in a row, never was better and is likely to take the top and never look back. The Lewis entry of Exhort and Ace of Trumps is formidable. Martha's Queen has been going in good fashion and should be close.

Eighth race—Yankee Lad is dropping down to meet these. Goes as an entry with Razzle Dazzle. Moon Harvest is good and will be in the thick of contention. Charming Mary is a possible surprise.

Best bet—Channing.

$9.60 Shot Defeats Guerrilla by a Nose In Seabrook Sprint

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., Aug. 12.—H. T. Palmer's Playhouse beat Tower Stables' favored Guerrilla by a nose in a stirring stretch duel today to win the Seabrook allowance sprint for 3-year-olds at Rockingham Park.

They moved to the front of the field at the fourth furlong of the ¼-mile dash, with Playhouse saving ground on the rail going around the turn. Guerrilla moved up to challenge in the stretch, but Playhouse managed to beat him to the wire in a photo finish.

Roncat was third three lengths ahead of Dixiana Farm's Dollar Bay.

Playhouse paid $9.60, $3.60 and $2.60 and Guerrilla returned $2.80 and $2.40. Roncat paid $3.20. The time was 1:12.4.

Boundford Is Hero

Cincinnati, Aug. 12 (AP).—P. T. Boundford allowed only two hits in pitching his Washington teammates to a 12-to-0 victory over Baltimore in opening rounds of the International Printers' Baseball Tournament here today.

The Washington hurler held Baltimore hitless for the first three innings, but in the fourth Shortstop Miller landed a safety.

In the eighth inning, Bounford permitted another, to Third Baseman Quinby, who cracked out a long single, but that was all.

Washington batters jumped on Pitcher Ringsdorf of Baltimore for nine runs in the second round with a series of singles.

Continuing their slugging spree, the Printer-Senators scored another run in the fourth and added additional tallies to their score in the fifth and seventh rounds.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 12. The entire crop of yearlings belonging to the late Willis Sharpe Kilmer was sold tonight at the Saratoga sales paddock to begin the dispersal of the famous Court Manor breeding establishment. It was announced from the auction block that this would be the last sale of Kilmer yearlings, as the entire establishment, including brood mares, stallions and other horses, was to be sold.

Tonight's big consignment went for $72,100, an average of $1,741 per head. Top price of $8,700 was paid by Louis B. Sun Briar—Polly Egret. He is a brother of Sun Egret, a prominent racer who has won $82,205 to date.

The King Ranch of Texas bought a brown colt by Neddie—Sunayr, a full brother to another noted winner, Nedayr, for $5,100. The same establishment also paid $2,000 for a gray filly by imported Gino—Sunburn. The dams of both these youngsters were sired by Sun Briar.

Mrs. Ethel Mars, of Chicago, did not buy any of the Kilmer yearlings, but she spent $17,500 for three yearlings offered by Henry H. Knight's Almahurst Farm of Kentucky. She paid $9,200 for a bay colt by Coldstream—Carbina; $4,200 for a colt by Sweep All—Pelota, and $4,100 for a colt by Sun Terry—Delicat.

In seven nights of selling a total of $675,200 has been spent for budding racers this season and it is expected the $1,000,000 mark will be reached this week.

Pepco Checks Rally, Defeats FBI, 10 to 7

Winners Stick to Guns and Turn Back Foes; Take Loop Lead

Pepco cut short an F. B. I. rally in the seventh and last inning yesterday to win the Government League game, 10-7, on the Ellipse and take a half-game lead over Naval Air with two games to play.

Starting pitchers Helmer, for the winners, and Nichols, for F. B. I., were hit early and often, but the latter finished the first inning with a 4-3 lead.

Garvey came in for some fine relief hurling for the winners and his mates pounded out a 10-to-4 lead by the seventh. F. B. I. scored 3 runs in the seventh, but the rally fell as many runs short.

Scott was the stick star for Pepco, his doubles batting in 3 runs and he scored once. Leatherwood, with a triple and two singles, scored 3 runs and batted in 1 run.

Beall kept the losers in the game by batting in 5 of the 7 runs with a double and triple.

By the Associated Press

Havre de Grace, Md., Aug. 12.—Eight new speedboat records established here July 20 and at Chestertown July 27, have been approved by Charles F. Chapman, secretary of the Racing Commission of the American Power Boat Association.

Tom Ehrhart, of York, Pa., and Louis Burk, of Philadelphia, were credited with two new marks each in the inboard runabout division.

Burk set a mile record of 42.532 miles per hour in the racing runabout division, and a 5-mile record of 41.152.

Official recognition was given two records set by Tom Chatfield's 91 cubic inch hydroplane, Scoundrel. Miss Polly Wright, of Philadelphia, drove the boat 56.604 miles an hour over a measured mile. Chatfield set a new 48.913 miles per hour competive mark with the boat.

The other marks were set by George Ward, of Wilmington, Del., who drove his racing runabout 50.962 miles an hour, and John Stiles, Philadelphia, who drove his D service runabout 39.691 miles per hour. All the records but Burk's were set at Havre de Grace.

a clinch. Both fighters appeared to be tiring. Abram's eye was again beginning to bleed.

Harry Hurst, Al Foreman's protege from Canada, won his second straight victory by scoring a five-round technical knockout over redheaded Charlie Gilley, of Baltimore. The Canadian sent his foe to the canvas with a barrage of rights and lefts, and the Baltimore boy took a count of seven.

Referee Charlie Reynolds stopped the fight shortly after Hurst had connected for a hard right. Time of the knockout was one minute. Gilley weighed 129 and Hurst 132½. The Canadian knocked out Bob Riley a few weeks ago on the Furr-Cocoa card.

In the opening six-rounder, Earl Ward, 144, of Baltimore, took the decision from Irish Bob Riley, of New York City.

Jack Tiger Flowers, 159½, of Washington, scored a knockout in 2 minutes 40 seconds of the first round over Babe Scott, 155½, of Baltimore, in the second bout of the show. Flowers floored his man with a looping right, and Referee Ray Bowen tolled the fatal ten over the Baltimore colored boy.

four-round ranks of the lightweights to a real spot in the sun.

This factor, alone, gives Pastor an added incentive. In the past he has liked nothing better than to upset the apple-cart wherever it concerned a heavyweight championship hopeful. Tomorrow night's party will be his fiftieth fight. He has lost only five—two to Louis.

If Conn wins, his get-together with the Brown Bomber in September will be either here or in Pittsburgh.

Promoter Jacobs has decided to stage a third Pastor-Louis fight, if Bobby hits the jackpot tomorrow, either in Chicago, Washington or in Detroit, where Bobby went 11 rounds with the heavyweight boss last September before the roof fell in on him.

Supporting the main go are four preliminary bouts with Steve Belloise, solid-slugging Bronx middleweight contender, and Augie Arellano, of Texas, tangling in the eight-round feature. If Belloise trounces the Texan, he will meet Ceferino Garcia, former New York and California recognized middleweight champion, here this fall.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 12 (AP).—Ray Carlen, manager of Lou Nova, contender for the heavyweight championship, said today Nova had challenged the winner of the Bob Pastor-Billy Conn fight.

Sears Reports Record Profits In Six Months

$15,120,763 Earned As Volume Soars To $304,255,539

By the Associated Press

Sears, Roebuck & Co. yesterday reported consolidated net income for February 1 to July 16 of $15,120,763, after all charges and provision for taxes, largest on record for the period. The figure for the corresponding 1939 period was $13,577,327.

This was equal to $2.67 per share outstanding, compared with $2.42 a share the corresponding 1939 period.

Consolidated sales totaled $304,255,539, also the largest on record, an increase of 10.5 per cent, compared with last year. The company contributed $1,067,250 to the employes' savings and profit-sharing fund in the 1940 period, compared with $901,130 the corresponding 1939 period.

Standard Oil of Indiana

Standard Oil of Indiana reported consolidated net profit for six months ended June 30 of $20,497,223 before anticipated Federal excess profits taxes, equal to $1.34 a share, compared with $14,979,694, or 98 cents a share, in the corresponding 1939 period. E. G. Seubert, president, attributed the jump in earnings to increased sales volume which more than offset declines in unit prices.

Greyhound Corporation

The Greyhound Corporation reported consolidated net income for the six months ended June 30 of $1,203,133, equivalent to 41 cents a share of common stock, as compared with $1,992,987, or 71 cents a share, for the corresponding 1939 period.

American-Hawaiian Steamship Co.

American - Hawaiian Steamship Co. and subsidiary reported net profit in the first half of 1940 of $2,288,175, including nonrecurring profit of $1,010,008 from sale of ships, equal to $5.26 a common share. No provision was made for possible excess profits taxes. This compared with $270,646, or 62 cents a share, in the comparable 1939 period.

Cottonseed Crushing Decreases in Year

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cottonseed crushed in the cotton year ended July 31 totaled 4,148,237 tons, compared with 4,470,516 tons in the previous year; and cottonseed on hand at mills July 31 totaled 38,896 tons, compared with 120,626 tons a year ago.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Shaking off an early decline largely reflecting hedging on the new crop in the Northwest, wheat prices today rallied to score fractional net gains, extending the recovery started late Saturday.

Wheat had dipped as much as ½ cent in early dealings. Closing figures, near the best level of the day, were ¼@¾ cent higher than Saturday, with September 74¼@74⅛; December, 75⅛@75¾.

Some buying came from mills, while spreaders were active. Evidence that large quantities of new grain are going into storage for Government loans helped to strengthen sentiment, but on the whole trade was largely professional, with most dealers awaiting European developments.

Corn closed unchanged to ¼ lower; September, 60⅞@60¾; December, 56. Oats, ⅛@½ lower. Soy beans, ⅛@⅞ higher. Rye, ¼@⅝ up, and lard unchanged to 2 higher.

Minneapolis wheat fell about a cent at one stage, reflecting hedging. Combined receipt at Minneapolis and Duluth totaled 1,159 cars compared with 319 a week ago and 768 a year ago, but it was reported the larger percentage of receipts were going into storage. Government agents said half of last week's receipts at Kansas City were earmarked for loans, and stocks there were estimated at near capacity of 60,000,000 bushels.

Corn prices were fairly steady despite rains in sections of the belt over the week-end and forecast of continued showery weather. The Government reported further deterioration has occurred since August 1 in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota. A Minnesota expert pointed out corn still has to contend with weather, particularly the threat of frost.

Hedging weakened oats, while rye followed wheat. Soy beans were strengthened by Illinois reports fo backward plant development, although the possibility of recovery with good general rains is better than for corn.

Lard was steadied by strength of hogs.

Wheat, Cotton Lead Rise in Commodities

Sugar Moves Against Trend, Toboggans To New Depths

By the Associated Press

Buyers started the week's trade in commodity futures willing to pay higher prices for most major staples.

At Chicago wheat yesterday extended the rally started late Saturday with gains of ⅛ to ¾ of a cent a bushel. Demand was bolstered by indications large quantities of wheat are going into storage, apparently for Government loans. Corn ended unchanged to ¼ down.

Cotton at New York added 20 to 50 cents a bale, influenced in part by the possibility of crop damage by the tropical storm which hit the South over the week-end.

Sharply against the trend at New York was the world sugar contract, which again tobogganed into record low price ground with losses of as much as 1/20 cent a pound. Domestic sugar, cocoa and cottonseed oil also dipped.

Newsprint Price Will Hold Steady

New York, Aug. 12 (INS).—R. J. Cullen, president of the International Paper Co., today announced maintenance of its present newsprint price schedule to domestic customers through the final quarter of this year and the first three months of 1941.

This schedule is based on the $50 per ton price for delivery at New York and Chicago and other Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Cullen stated that increasing volume since the war had contributed largely to the company's ability to absorb increased costs of labor and material. He pointed out that the price of newsprint has now been stabilized for more than three years.

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Co., cited today a 1937 report of the Federal Trade Commission to back up his claim that American and other big tobacco companies were not guilty of the charges brought by the Department of Justice in its anti-monopoly suit filed in the Federal Court at Lexington, Ky., on July 24.

Hill gave his comment in a 72-page pamphlet history of American tobacco and the domestic tobacco industry. It was prepared for distribution among the company's stockholders.

"That genuine competition between the various tobacco manufacturing companies has existed since 1912," said Hill, "is well known not only to those who have studied the industry, but to Government representatives who have analyzed the business from time to time in the course of various investigations."

Hill quoted from the trade commission's findings:

"The companies concerned have consistently denied that they ever exchange information regarding prices or contemplated price changes or arrive at any understandings concerning them. The circumstances stated suggest that there are advance understandings but there is no evidence to support a conclusion contrary to the representations by the manufacturers. Their statements, which are supported by documentary evidence, show that it is entirely possible for the price change to be accomplished, almost simultaneously without any previous understanding."

The Department of Justice charged the major tobacco companies employed price fixing devices to eliminate competition and "abused their position of dominance by exacting harsh and oppressive terms from those with whom they deal."

Named besides American Tobacco were Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., P. Lorillard Co., Philip Morris, & Co., Ltd., Inc., Imperial Tobacco Co. of Great Britain & Ireland, Ltd., British-American Tobacco Co., Ltd., and Universal Leaf Tobacco Co., as well as 26 other corporations and 33 individuals.

Books Are Closed On Shipbuilder's Stock Offering

Washington underwriters were advised yesterday afternoon that a new stock offering of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. was far oversubscribed. The local firms included in a group of 75 underwriters were Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath and Johnston, Lemon & Co. The books on the offering were closed before noon of the first day.

The offering consisted of 71,550 shares of $5 cumulative convertible preferred stock, without par value, and 558,498 shares of common stock of $1 par value.

The preferred was offered at a price of $102 a share, and the common at $22 a share. The preferred is convertible into common stock at any time at the rate of $30 per share of common.

Of the preferred, 15,000 shares were sold by the company, and the remainder for the account of certain stockholders. Net proceeds of the sale of the 15,000 preferred shares, together with additional company funds, will be used to redeem, at 105 on January 15 next, the company's $1,880,000, principal amount, of 6 per cent first mortgage bonds, series "A", due 1972. These bonds represent the company's entire outstanding funded debt.

Sugar Futures

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Another flurry of liquidation beat down the world sugar contract to record low prices today. Final quotations were off 4 to 5½ points on sales of 8,500 tons. Short covering stabilized the market at times, but follow-through was lacking. December closed .73½; March, .78. The domestic contract set off on a steadier tack, but a last-minute dip put the close down 1 to 2 points on sales of 8,650 tons. In the raw market sales came to light from last Friday of 24,000 bags of prompt shipment Cubas at the duty-paid equivalent of 2.68 cents a pound, and 24,000 bags of Cubas to clear August 20 at the same price. Duty-free offerings were held at 2.70.

Refined remained locally at 4.20-4.35 cents a pound.

3% Fewer Cattle Reported on Feed In Corn States

By the Associated Press

The Agricultural Marketing Service reported yesterday that, due to "general unprofitableness of feeding operations this year," 3 per cent fewer cattle were on feed in corn belt States August 1 than a year ago.

This was the first time since 1937 that August 1 feeding figures declined, the service said. Iowa was the only corn belt State having more cattle on feed than a year ago, it said.

Records of marketing and slaughter, the service reported, showed more cattle moved out of corn-belt feed lots during the first seven months of this year than during the corresponding period last year.

Contributing causes of the decline, it said, apparently has been scarcity and relatively high prices in some areas of corn not sealed under Government loans, relatively high prices of feeder cattle and rather poor prospects for the new corn crop in some States.

The Federal Reserve Bank also holds $1,800,000,000 in gold for foreign banks, so more than 80 per cent is in the U. S. In 1914, less than 23 per cent was in this country. Stocks Hold Firm in Continued Quiet Deals; Trades Await Latest Phase of British Battle

New York, Aug. 12.—Wall Street was long on hopes but short on action today. Students of the market feel that we cannot expect any decisive change in securities until more is known of the effect of the latest phase of the German attack on Great Britain.

The hard blows struck from the air today were seen as a possible prelude to an actual invasion but it was significant that the market was firm even though there is general apprehension among traders.

Price changes and the volume of business were in line with other recent sessions. Only 288,240 shares changed hands on the big board. The composite average advanced 0.16 point, with the major part of the change accounted for by a jump in Norfolk & Western by a more modest advance in Union Pacific.

Norfolk jumped 8¼ points on two trades and Union Pacific was up 1¼ on a single sale. The former was not sensational from a percentage standpoint as Norfolk was the only issue on the big board to sell today in the rarified atmosphere above 200. Had it not been for these two individual issues, the rail average would not have done as well as most of the industrial groups.

Store issues were well supported and miscellaneous manufacturing shares moved up. DuPont gained 2¾, Sears Roebuck 1¼, General Mills 4, Dow Chemical 2, Murphy 2¼, Budd preferred 3¾ and American Rolling Mill preferred 2. Most of these issues were dull, however. A quarter point was the largest price change in the list of 15 most active stocks.

Paper stocks reflected some profit-taking. International Paper was the day's most active member, closing down a quarter along with its preferred. Bethlehem and United States Steel were firm to higher.

Business news was favorable but ineffective marketwise. The Federal Reserve Board's new index of industrial production indicates for July that activity was continued at about the same rate as in June. The new basis of calculating this index, based on the 1935-1939 average instead of on the more prosperous period between 1923 and 1925, has the result of making the index figure higher. Thus it is placed for June and July at 121 against the recent low of 111 in April and a peak of 126 last December. On the old basis the July figure would be 117.

Steel news was entered on the favorable side of the ledger. The United States Steel Corporation's shipments for July were announced as 1,296,837 tons, the largest for that month since 1937 and compared with 1,209,684 the previous month. Operations for the industry started the week at 89.5 per cent of capacity, a drop of 1 point, which was in line with expectations.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced for the 24 weeks ended July 16 a good increase in earnings and for the first six months of the year the largest sales in the company's history.

Equally gratifying to the financial community was the good reception accorded the offering of preferred and common stocks of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., which was made by a large syndicate despite the ominous tone of war news. Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore, is expected to place a preferred stock issue on the market tomorrow and there are several other large pieces of new financing being discussed.

Little or nothing of significance appeared in the record of bond dealings here today with volume limited and prices in most groups virtually unchanged.

Among United States Treasury obligations final prices in over-counter dealings showed only maximum advances of 2-32 point for a few issues with most issues at previous closing levels. Trading in treasurys on the Stock Exchange likewise was indecisive and activity small.

In the foreign section some Belgian bonds were a point or more above the previous close, Norway 4½s of 1956 sold up 2 points and Japanese power issues were stronger. Canadian bonds, including rail issues, displayed some strength.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—The securities market kept its footing today despite the paucity of business. Government bonds lost part of early gains, but in the industrial stock division modest strength developed in department store, electrical equipment and supply shares. Selected Kaffirs showed rallying tendencies. Minor gains dotted the oil list, while rubbers moved unevenly. In the foreign bond market some Egyptian loans added as much as 1½ points and Japanese issues improved fractionally.

Liverpool—Nearby deliveries made the best showing in the cotton futures market today. Final prices were 11 points higher to 2 lower on demand influenced by share gains in Egyptian cotton and fears the war zone might be extended.

Slight Decrease In Steel Output Seen This Week

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills will trim operating schedules to 89.5 per cent of capacity from 90.5 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. Last week's rate was the highest in seven months.

A month ago output was at 86.8 per cent and a year ago at 82.1. Steel circles said vacation holidays in Pittsburgh contributed to the decline.

United Air Lines Names New Aide

All Government business going through United Air Lines' Washington office will be handled by Karl P. Hughes as the company's Government travel representative, it was announced yesterday by O. C. Enge, district traffic manager.

Enge said that a special department has been created under Hughes to handle increased bookings of Army, Navy and other Government officials.

Corporations Should Nourish Trend to Simplified Reports

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator.

The major crises in our personal careers occur in moments of transitory victory. It takes great strength of character to show forbearance and balance in times of great success.

This principle applies in all phases of life—to military conquerors, to politicians, and to corporate executives.

Unquestionably the national defense requirements for efficient production and the selection of a corporate official as a candidate for President by one of the two major parties measure the partial recovery of the hitherto lost prestige of the business man.

Mr. Rukeyser

Nevertheless, it would be a colossal blunder if business executives, sensing the change in the tides of public opinion, should use the current trend as an excuse for letting down on newly conceived, streamlined efforts to keep the public better informed about the economic and social functions of business.

When business was definitely in the dog house, this column pioneeded in behalf of new, simplified and streamlined accounting fashions as a means of imparting the truth about business.

It was argued here that vivid and truthful reiteration of the realities about business would constitute an effective answer to the fantasies and lies disseminated by the demagogues.

When, in 1937 and 1938, leading corporations began to make use of this new "short form" technique, this column reported that a new ingredient had been injected into popular opinion in the United States. In recent weeks, we have been witnessing the fruits of the change.

In view of the fact that the reputation of organized business is improving, should management revert to the old, convention form of accounting, which was of little or no use as a good will builder?

No! On the contrary, there should at this time be redoubled effort to vitalize a new trend through nourishing it with all the help that human ingenuity can give.

It would be stupid to assume that there will be any turning back of the hands of the clock of history, and that therefore it is no longer necessary to woo by every legitimate means the friendship of the public toward private enterprise.

The real value of full and dramatic disclosure about the realities of corporate enterprise comes from unremitting effort through the years. The valuable new accounting tool is misused when it is rushed out temporarily when a company faces an immediate crisis.

Truth telling in simple and dramatic form constitutes preventive medicine, which tends to obviate the occurrence of crises.

If workers listen to misstatements by outsiders, then perhaps the employer has been guilty of contributory negligence in failure through the years to keep his employes fully informed.

If the short form constituted a useful social tool as a means of bucking the trend, it is doubly useful now as a device for holding some of the current gains in popular approval.

Likewise, in these times of emotionalism when there is still agitation for "punitive" taxes on industry, the simplified short form of accounting is invaluable for disclosing the effect of such impediments on the free circulation of goods and services.

Corporate business recognized that the public would accept the truth about private enterprise earlier than the politicians did, and, if there had not been this demonstration of the power of the truth simply disclosed, it is doubtful whether while unemployment was still rife, delegates to a national convention would have assumed the risk of nominating a business man.

Today's Radio Highlights

7:30 a. m., WOL—As you must have heard, Walter Compton is back in town, and with a bride too, girls. He got a rollicking hand at the Capitol last night with his Jackpot and is now back on his regular soapbox, holding forth on the headlines.

3 p. m., WJSV—Arch McDonald airs the Detroit-Cleveland baseball game, while the Washington-Philadelphia night game is scheduled for later broadcast on WOL.

4:15, WMAL—"Uncle Mal" Claire will devote his next four story hours to his own simplified version for children of Wagner's "Lohengrin," with music from the opera played by Irma Glenn.

6:15, WJSV—"You're in the Army Now" shouts Ray Perkins on the first of a series of broadcasts from the war games of the United States Army in the Plattsburg-Ogdensburg-Watertown area. There will be a lot of Washingtonians up there, by the way.

7, WJSV—Rightful owners of an unclaimed fortune of $43,000 left by a widow who died in Detroit are sought on the Court of Missing Heirs. She came to this country from Ireland in 1851 and died last November, leaving her late husband's fortune to a woman cousin, who is as yet unlocated.

7:30, WMAL—No less a person than the peppery Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes joins former Republican National Committeeman from New York Kenneth Simpson on Information Please.

8:30, WOL—Washington plays Philadelphia in that talked-of night game. This makes Arch McDonald's second game-airing of the day.

9, WMAL—Billy Conn and Bob Pastor fight their non title bout at New York's Polo Grounds.

Listen! with Glynn

The old king of the fable who had such a tough time getting story-tellers to tell him stories that were long enough—killing them off in a rage when they had to conclude after only a few weeks—was just born too soon, that's all.

Today he'd be able to remain continuously happy with the aid of a simple invention known as radio.

This helpful little thought is occasioned by the notice we've just received that C. B. S.'s "Big Sister" program, heard over WJSV every weekday at 10:30 a. m., had its 1,001st broadcast yesterday. All indications—they're known as surveys in the radio business—point to the fact that you'll be hearing the 2,002d in another four years. And—well, we could continue like this forever (we can count), but we won't.

Alice Frost and Martin Gabel have played the main roles in the series ever since it was started in September of 1936. They get vacations each year, we hasten to add, by dint of the author's writing them out of the script separately for a couple of weeks each summer. Other regulars heard in the show include Esther Ralston, Margalo Gillmore and Peggy Conklin. They're all beginning to think radio is here to stay.

Contract Bridge

A grand slam is presented in today's box. It reveals a rare automatic squeeze, which becomes effective at the third trick.

The hand was played in a recent tournament, when Dr. Lawrence Barnett and F. M. Blun, both of Scarsdale, N. Y., were the defenders. Honesty impels us to report that West, the fair declarer in the case, failed to observe or utilize the advantage that the squeeze gave her, and ingloriously went down one trick at her grand-slam contract. She tried a backward finesse of the diamonds, leading the queen; when North did not cover, she let it ride, and South won his king. South was surprised and delighted, as he realized that the three discards he had been forced to take on spades had left his cards open to capture.

On the first two spade leads South could throw two hearts, but on the third spade lead he was compelled to make a ruinous discard. If he threw a heart, declarer could win the whole heart suit, obtaining one discard for a club and a second for a diamond; the two remaining diamonds could be trumped.

If South tossed a diamond, declarer could play the ace, trump the diamond five and establish both the queen and jack. The club eight could be thrown on the queen of hearts.

If Dr. Barnett threw a club, declarer could discard a club on the heart queen and ruff two clubs, establishing the queen; the remaining two diamonds she could trump in dummy. By taking advantage of South's forced discards at the start, declarer could always bring in her grand-slam contract.

ICC Control Bill Approved By House

Measure to Expand Commission Powers Goes to Senate

By the Associated Press

Legislation providing unified control of the Nation's rail, motor and water carriers by the Interstate Commerce Commission won final approval of the House yesterday.

A conference report on the bill, which places inland and intercoastal water carriers under the I. C. C. and expands the powers of the commission to effect consolidations and reorganizations of transportation systems was adopted, 24 to 74, and sent to the Senate.

The final vote came after a vigorous but futile fight by friends of the water carriers to restore to the bill the so-called Wadsworth amendment, which would permit rate reductions if they provided "compensatory" returns to the carrier.

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, warned that unless this amendment, which was stricken out despite previous instructions from the House to retain it, were restored, the legislation might have adverse effects on water transportation.

Wadsworth Is Beaten

However, Wadsworth was beaten, 200 to 114, on a motion to recommit the bill to the conferees with instructions to reinstate the amendment.

The action of the conferees was denounced by Representative Culkin (Republican), of New York, as "parliamentary Hitlerism," but was defended by Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana.

Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, also defended elimination of the Wadsworth amendment, contending it would result in increased freight and passenger rates.

The conference version of the bill contained provisions to protect labor from the effect of consolidations and reorganizations by providing that workers eliminated by such orders be compensated for a period up to four years.

Charges that the legislation would "destroy" water carriers were denied by Halleck, who said that "with the country committed to a policy of regulation in transportation it is only fair that all forms should be regulated." The Interstate Commerce Commission, he added, "didn't wreck the motor carriers."

Representative Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, protested that the conference committee wrote language into the bill repealing provisions of the Panama Canal Act prohibiting railroads from acquiring ownership or ontrol of competing water carriers.

Whitting contended this action of the committee "crucifies competition in the Great Lakes and inland waterways."

Representative Lea replied that the I. C. C. "for the past 17 years" has been exercising powers with regard to railroad acquisition of water carriers.

He said the bill protected Great Lakes shipping by exempting bulk carriers from I. C. C. control.

Arizona Bars Communist Party on Ballot

Temporary Injunction Issued Against West Virginia Ticket

By the Associated Press

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 12.—The Secretary of State's office today banned the Communist Party from the September 10 primary and November general elections.

As formal notification of the action was dispatched to Morris Graham, executive secretary of the party in Arizona, Gov. Bob Jones expressed "100 per cent approval."

Dan Garvey, assistant secretary of state, who wrote the letter, said the only way the Communists could get on the ballot would be to bring mandamus actions.

Garvey's letter cited an opinion of Attorney General Joe Conway that a Communist could not qualify to hold office in Arizona "because his avowed purpose and object and his duty to his organization require that he do everything possible to overthrow the Constitution of the United States by force."

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Circuit Judge Julian F. Bouchelle today granted the American Legion a temporary injunction restraining Secretary of State W. S. O'Brien from placing the Communist Party ticket on the State's November 5 election ballot.

Communist Party attorneys charged there was a State-wide conspiracy, aided by State officials, against the Communist Party after Judge Bouchelle denied a motion to remove the case to Federal court.

Harold W. Houston, attorney representing Oscar O. Wheeler, of Beckley, W. Va., Communist candidate for Governor, and eight Presidential electors charged in the legion suit with misrepresenting a nominating petition, told the court:

That O'Brien sent a list of the 3,684 signatures on the nominating petition to the Dies Committee investigating un-American activities; that Attorney General Clarence Meadows prepared indictment forms and sent them to county attorneys; that Gov. Homer A. Holt made no response to an appeal to protect the rights of signers, and that a number of signers were indicted and sentenced.

Agriculture 'Clip Sheets' Stay Clear of Political Implications

By Edward Ryan

A gentle indecision about the world of men and grassroots and jaboticaba trees has been coloring some of the recent public documents issued by Secretary Wallace's Agriculture Department.

The documents are known by the rude name of "clip sheets." They are characterized by a dearth of political implications and social significence whose bearing on the Secretary's campaign for the Vice-Presidency may be confequential.

Weeks ago the Secretary's bulletin warned against faith in panaceas. It described this cryptic finding by one scientist—the idea that certain plants in the garden will drive away mosquitoes and other insect pests is attractive but unfortunate. The misfortune, it developed, was that the idea does not work out in practice. No plants, and not even the scientists, have found a single chemical offensive to all insects, the report said. Reason for the failure, it added, is that differences in sense of smell among insects is as great as among higher animals.

Advice on Beetle Trapping

Several days later the bulletin reported that the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine does not recommend Japanese beetle trapping as desirable for individuals. The trapping, it was indicated, should be left to the Government. Individual beetle trappers face such dangers as these:

"The bait is likely to attract beetles from a considerable area, but many of these beetles may not enter the trap, with the result that the lawn or garden near the trap may have more beetles than it would without a trap—although neighbors at a distance may have fewer."

Moth larva looking for a taste of your winter overcoat can get there through an opening only four thousandths of an inch wide, no wider than the thickness of good quality writing paper, another experimenter found. In a subtle afterthought, the investigator pointed out that "most newsprint paper is slightly thinner,—about three and a half thousandths of an inch."

Recently the reports have been more specific. For example: "Alfalfa, good as it is, could be much better." Plant breeders are seeing what they can do about it by crossing Turkish alfalfa with heavy yielding hay strains to produce hybrids that will spread by stolons and rhizomes, instead of seeds.

The food of queen bees contains few vitamins, according to another report. This food differs from the food eaten by the worker bees, and develops into a queen instead of a worker, as queens and workers "is probably the reason why she come from similar eggs."
